This course guide has been prepared months in advance of the 2004-2005 academic year and information contained herein is subject to change. Students are advised not to purchase any texts without the approval of the professor concerned.

Due to the renumbering of courses in the Department, students should consult the list of equivalent undergraduate courses in the back of the 2004-2005 undergraduate calendar.

FACULTY

A list of the full-time faculty follows below. All possess degrees from universities and/or schools of advanced studies that represent the best academic centres for the study of religion in North America and India. All have published books that have made a contribution to their particular fields of study, have published in learned journals and given papers at learned societies. They have also won a reputation among their students for being good teachers, concerned about the quality of instruction at Concordia University, as well as for being "available" and committed to the development of a more meaningful student life.

INTRODUCTION TO THE DEPARTMENT

General Objectives

The Department of Religion is dedicated to the academic study of religions and other social and cultural phenomena in so far as they have been influenced or affected by religions. We are interested in the comparative study of many religions. Although we do study how many religious traditions articulate and defend their own self-understandings, we treat these theologies and buddhologies academically and comparatively.

Nature of Religious Studies

The academic study of religion is a multi-disciplinary enterprise. It involves the historical examination of religious movements, the literary analyses of their literatures, philosophical reflections on beliefs and teachings, the social scientific investigations of their rituals, practices, texts, and institutions, the psychological study of their participants and ethical inquiries regarding both their moral writings and social roles.

Correspondingly, the faculty in the department have been trained in a number of academic disciplines including history, sociology, anthropology, literary studies, philosophy, psychology and theology as well as in the study of particular religious traditions.

KNOWLEDGE OF TWO MAJOR RELIGIOUS TRADITIONS

The Department believes that every Major or Honours student in Religion or in Judaic Studies should possess, at time of graduation, a knowledge of at least two major religious traditions. For example, the student who is pursuing a Major in Judaic Studies will take some courses in a religious tradition other than Judaism. This basic principle reinforces the emphasis upon the centrality of the discipline of the History of Religions. A particular religious tradition can best be understood in the context of the general religious history of humankind.

DEPARTMENTAL PROGRAMMES

The Department of Religion offers at the undergraduate level: minors, majors and honours programmes in Religion and in Judaic Studies. The degree requirements for all of these programmes can be found below. We also offer several graduate programmes: an M.A. in the History and Philosophy of Religion, an M.A. in Judaic Studies, and a Ph.D. in Religion. For further information on our graduate programmes, please contact the graduate programme assistant at 848-2077.

Women and Religion

As part of the Department of Religion's undergraduate curriculum, a concentration in Women and Religion is offered. A variety of special courses are included in the regular program for the BA major in Religion. Religion majors can focus on this area for either the primary or secondary concentration requirements.

The study of women and religion is a growing field in which the Department of Religion of Concordia University has long been a leader. This structured concentration solidifies our commitment to this field and enables us to prepare students in a systematic and consistent fashion. The concentration furthers the work of the department in that it will allow students to pursue course work from a comparative, cross-cultural and multi-tradition perspective. The study of the role of women in the history and practice of religion introduces our students to an exciting and vital area of study.

THE BOYD SINYARD AWARD

Each year the Boyd Sinyard award is given to the outstanding graduating student in Religion. The award is named after the first chairman of the Department of Religion at Sir George Williams University.

CONCORDIA RELIGION STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION (CRSA)

If you are studying within the Department of Religion (i.e. if you are an Honours, Major, Minor or just taking a course offered by the department), you are a member of the CRSA. CRSA is a student-administered organization dedicated to fostering community and expanding the educational experience of all Religion students. Each year the executive branch of CRSA (five students elected to plan and administer CRSA affairs) offers Religion students the chance to meet each other and faculty at various social gatherings, as well as the opportunity to enliven their education by attending CRSA sponsored lectures given by learned academics and religious thinkers from all parts of the world. CRSA members are urged to take advantage of the student lounge located in the basement of annex R (2050 Mackay). This is a place where students can study, hang out or use the free phone. If you would like more information about CRSA, leave a message in our mailbox at the Department of Religion.

Room DA-100 (Loyola)

RELIGIONS OF THE WEST

Instructor: Perwaiz Hayat

Judaism, Christianity and Islam are three major world religions with their distinct religious traditions. Since all of them grew in the “West”, the focus will be on their common background which ranges from the influences of Greco-Roman culture to the Zoroastrian traditions of Mesopotamia. Attention will be paid to their monotheistic nature and to their linear view of history. However, the goal of the course material will be to sensitise students to similarities which, hopefully, will amplify the capability of students to appreciate the diversity. Hence the more students will learn to appreciate the historical convergences among Judaism, Christianity and Islam, the better equipped they will be to identify divergences. Moreover, the course will examine various readings in Judaism, Christianity and Islam focused on subjects such as Scripture and tradition, Monotheism, Authority and Ethics. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 213 or RELZ 214 may not take this course for credit.

RELI 215/2 – 01 (3 credits)

(RELZ 216/2 02)
ENCOUNTERING WORLD RELIGIONS
Instructor: Tannie Liu

M.W. 1015-1130
Room HB-130 (Loyola)

Encountering World Religions examines religions in the modern era, as they take on a global mixture of various religious cultures. The course is intended to introduce students not majoring in religion to the major religious traditions in modern society and examine the issues facing them in face of this diversity. In the first part of the course, we look at the key concepts in the development of globalization and religion with some important theorists being considered. The second part of the course will introduce students to the major traditions in the modern world, their basic beliefs and practices and some of the modern day developments of these religious traditions. In the final part of the course, we will examine these religions' encounters with the modern world and some strategies that have been developed by modern societies to cope with this diversity. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 298C or RELZ 216 may not take this course for credit.

RELI 216/4 – AA (3 credits)

RELI 217/2 AA (3 credits)
CULTS AND RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY IN NORTH AMERICA
Instructor: Susan Palmer

T. 1800-2015
Room H-920

This course takes a sociological and historical approach towards understanding new religious movements (NRMs), popularly known as "cults". The course examines the reasons for their controversial status in society, and undertakes a survey of the beliefs, rituals, leadership, membership, recruitment strategies, and social organization of a number of specific NRMs. Note: Students who have received credit for this topic under a RELI 298 number may not take this course for credit.

RELI 220/2- A (3 credits)
INTRODUCTION TO JUDAISM
Instructor: Ira Robinson

M.W. 1445-1600
Room FG-311

This course will examine the history of Jews and of Judaism from ancient times until the present. It will emphasize the continuities, changes and interrelationships with respect to Jewish social, religious and intellectual life through the ages. It will also carefully examine the varieties of belief and practice in contemporary Jewish life. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 222 may not take this course for credit.

RELI 223/2 - A (3 credits)
INTRODUCTION TO CHRISTIANITY
Instructor: Dilys Patterson

T.J. 1445-1600
Room CL-214

This course provides an introduction to key developments and enduring structures in the historical evolution of Christianity. It examines the variety of expressions of faith that are embodied by the Eastern churches (e.g. Greek and Russian Orthodox, Syrian) and the Western (e.g. Roman Catholic, Protestant), and traces the ways in which institutions, symbols, and rituals have in the past and continue today to carry forward the Christian tradition as a world religion in a variety of cultural contexts.

RELI 224/2 – A (3 credits)
INTRODUCTION TO ISLAM
Instructor: Perwaiz Hayat

M.W. 1315-1430
Room CL-220

This course introduces students to Islam. It will focus upon the teachings of the Qur'an and the life of the Prophet Muhammad. It will study the traditional view of Islamic history taking into consideration the vast area of sociological and political approaches. It will also offer in-depth study of Islamic beliefs and practices. Emphasis will be laid on the diversity of the interpretation available in Muslim thought and culture. Note: Students who have taken RELI 313 may not take this course for credit.

RELI 225/2 – A (3 credits)
INTRODUCTION TO HINDUISM
Instructor: Steven Lindquist

M.W. 1315-1430
FG-311

This course introduces students to some of the essential concepts of Hinduism that have been of enduring significance for the tradition – such as dharma (religious duty, as well as the spiritual/social order), moksa (the goal of liberation), and karma (action, understood in ethical as well as ritual terms). This course focuses on the ways in which these ideals have been embodied in particular scriptural, historical, and regional contexts by examining narrative literature, various practices of worship and asceticism, and contemporary interpretations. Note: Students who have received credit for this topic under a RELI 298 number may not take this course for credit.

RELI 226/2 – A (3 credits)
INTRODUCTION TO BUDDHISM
Instructor: Steven Lindquist

M.W.1445-1600
Room FG-B040

This course introduces students to the diversity of forms of Buddhism that have emerged in history and are practiced today. It examines those aspects that are shared in common by Buddhists all over the world, including reverence for the Buddha, support of the monastic order, and adherence to the Buddha's teachings. The course explores the ways in which these ideals and beliefs are expressed through such Buddhist practices as worship, study, pilgrimage, and meditation. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 350 or 364 may not take this course for credit.

RELI 233/2 - A (3 credits) T.J. 1145-1300
INTRODUCTION TO WOMEN AND RELIGION Room FG-B040
Instructor: Norma Joseph

This introduction to the particular problems and issues in the study of women and religion uses case studies from various religious traditions. The course presents a survey of the different levels of participation, the complex ritual activities, and the intriguing divine imagery associated with women that are found in many religious traditions. Questions pertaining to the contemporary feminist discourse on such topics as witchcraft, patriarchy, and goddess religions are also explored.

RELI 298B/4 - AA (3 credits) J. 1800-2015
RELIGION AND ALTERNATIVE MEDICINE Room H-415
(Selected Topics in Religion)
Instructor: Patricia O'Rourke

This course will look at popular forms of alternative medicine and religious healing rituals. It will explore the historical and philosophical relationship between religious belief, spiritual practices and types of healing outside conventional medical practice.

(RELZ 298E/4 A) Room H-431
WISDOM AND ENLIGHTENMENT (Selected Topics in Religion)
Instructor: John Bilodeau

Most of the world's religions have formulated a set of teachings which convey an idea of the fundamental realities of the nature of the universe, and of the path by which humankind can come to a realization of these realities. Such a realization is frequently equated with the ultimate goal of enlightenment as liberation, or knowledge of/union with the transcendent. This course will explore several of the religious traditions which have developed texts and practices leading to wisdom. Note: Students who have received credit for RELZ 218 may not take this course for credit

RELI 301/2 - A (3 credits) T.J. 1015-1130
BIBLICAL STUDIES I: THE HEBREW BIBLE Room LS-429
Instructor: Mayjee Philip

This course is an introduction to the Hebrew Bible / Old Testament. The goal of the course is to introduce students to the life, literature, history, politics, and religion of ancient Israel. We will do this primarily by studying and analyzing various Biblical texts, using anthropological, literary, historical, and theological perspectives. An in-depth study of these texts is beyond the scope of this course.

RELI 302/4 - A (3 credits) J. 1445-1730
BIBLICAL STUDIES II: CHRISTIAN ORIGINS Room GM-212
Instructor: Philip Harland

A critical survey of Christian origins, this course focuses on New Testament literature and considers historical setting, history of text, religious and cultural significance. Attention is paid to extra-canonical literature and other relevant sources.

SELF AND OTHER: EXPLORING VALUE CHOICES IN PERSONAL & INTERPERSONAL RELATIONS

Instructor: Marc Lalonde

This course considers ethical issues arising in the context of personal and interpersonal relations, families and friendships. In particular, this course intends to explore the meaning, purpose, and function of ethics and ethical thought at the level of the individual's personal existence. Toward that end, the course will endeavour to comprehend the ethical in its broadest sense as a framework of meaning that attempts to order the personal life in relation to the self and the course of its actualization; in relation to significant Others and society at large; as embodied, sexual beings; as persons with gendered identities; and as persons with a religious interest. These basic themes and issues are variously considered in the course readings which introduce the student to a number of alternative, sometimes contrasting ways of being-in-the-world. In this fashion, the plurality, plasticity, and complexity of the personal life comes to the fore in relation to corresponding forms of ethical thought and reflection. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 331 or RELZ 310 may not take this course for credit.

SHIITE ISLAM

Room H-429

Instructor: Linda Darwish

This course explores the history and ideas of Twelver Shiism, from the inception of the movement to the present. In addition to the Twelvers, the various sects are introduced and treated, including the Ismailis, Zaydis, Druze, and Alawites. Basic Shiite doctrines and practices such as the Imamate, messianism, quietism, crypto-religion (taqiya), esotericism, syncretism, and rituals of lamentation are considered, along with the development of the legal system. Study of the modern period treats subjects such as theocracy, political activism, martyrdom, and intellectualism. The course includes various centres of Shiite population: Iran, Iraq, the Gulf, Lebanon, Pakistan, and North America.

HISTORY OF CHRISTIANITY I

Instructor: Donald Boisvert

This first course of the sequence on Christianity, historically considered, examines the life and thought of Christians as a minority in the Graeco-Roman world and their transition to a position of power. The course studies the rise of monasticism after the collapse of the Roman Empire, the construction of medieval Christianity and its flowering with the founding of the Friars amid the great theological syntheses of the thirteenth century. Saint Augustine, Saint Francis and Aquinas are the key figures studied. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 303 may not take this course for credit.

HERESY, DISSIDENCE AND THE END OF THE WORLD

Instructor: Philip Harland

This course investigates marginal forms of Christianity which have found themselves ignored, excluded, or suppressed by more mainstream Christian groups and institutions. The course explores aspects of the history of heretical movements, mysticism, and apocalypticism. It looks at the world-views and practices associated with such marginal forms of Christianity, placing religious traditions and movements within their broader social, cultural, and political contexts. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 308 may not take this course for credit.

CANADIAN JEWISH WRITING
(Selected Topics in Canadian Jewish Studies)
Instructor: Norm Ravvin

T.J. 1445-1600
Room CL-245

The Jewish voice in Canadian literature can be seen to be the first opening toward a multicultural tradition in this country. Writers such as A.M. Klein, Mordecai Richler, Henry Kreisel, and Leonard Cohen created an English language tradition of Jewish writing in this country that is varied, provocative, and lively. We will look at novels, short stories, some poetry, memoir and criticism, to gain a sense of what led to the development of this tradition; what its influences were; and what its impact has been on Canada more broadly. We will also consider non-Jewish authors, such as Gwethalyn Graham and Mavis Gallant, who were among the first to write about Jewish characters for an English-speaking Canadian audience. This course will allow students to consider issues related to Canadian identity and culture, ethnic studies, and multiculturalism alongside literary questions.

THE IMPACT OF THE HOLOCAUST ON RELIGIOUS THOUGHT

H-539-3

Instructor: Michael Oppenheim

This course will explore some of the ways that Jewish thought and, secondarily, Christian thought have responded to the destruction of European Jewry, the Shoah or Holocaust. Although Jewish and Christian thinkers have regarded the Holocaust as both unimaginable and unthinkable, they have felt compelled to confront it. We will look at the effort of philosophers and theologians to assess the magnitude of the event, the challenges that it poses for Jewish and Christian life, tradition, and thought, and the responses required to meet its challenges. Among the thinkers that will be studied are: Martin Buber, Abraham Heschel, Eliezer Berkovits, Richard Rubenstein, Elie Wiesel, Emil Fackenheim, Irving Greenberg, Alice Eckardt, and Rosemary Ruether. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 358 may not take this course for credit.

RELIGIONS OF CHINA AND JAPAN

Room TBA

Instructor: Tannie Liu

This course covers 3,000 years of Chinese and Japanese civilization and culture, focusing on the unfolding of religious consciousness as it moved down the corridors of history. The course will begin with early Chinese indigenous religions, which include the traditions of I Ching, Confucianism and Taoism. The course will then proceed to examine the development of Buddhism in China, and its impact on Chinese culture. Major schools of thought will be singled out for focused study. The latter part of the course will examine Japanese religious consciousness, which includes Shinto and Buddhism in its Japanese cultural context and also contemporary religious life in Japan. In the course of our study, the work of traditional scholars and representative modern thinkers will be considered. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 316 may not take this course for credit.

HINDUISM IN DIALOGUE WITH THE MODERN WORLD

Instructor: T. S. Rukmani

A noteworthy feature of contemporary Hinduism has been the emergence of several original thinkers who have been devising strategies for dialogue, with the aim of promoting mutual tolerance and understanding among religions and of establishing a network of harmonious relations among the people of the world. This course particularly focuses on how the strategies of satyagraha (soul force) proposed by Mahatma Gandhi, and of svadhyaya (reflective self-study) proposed by Pandurang Athavale, may facilitate meaningful interreligious dialogue and the realization of the ideals of social progress, human rights, and equality. Note: Students who have received credit for RELI 345 may not take this course for credit.

PSYCHOLOGY OF RELIGION

Room TBA

Instructor: Michael Oppenheim

The discipline of Psychology of Religion can usually be described in terms of two streams.

The first is experimental and empirical and the second philosophical and theoretical. This class will focus on the second stream. It will seek insights from the convergence of the disciplines of psychology and religious studies in addressing such questions as: What does it mean to be religious? What is the role of religion in individual development? What is the place of relationships to others in religious life? How is authenticity characterized? How are gender differences treated in the psychology of religion? We will explore some of the classical psychological theories of religion, those that were developed by James, Freud, Erikson, and Jung, as well as more recent developments by post-modern and feminist theorists.

JEWISH AND EARLY CHRISTIAN COMMUNITIES INTERACTING Room H-400
(Topics in Religious Interaction)
Instructor: Dilys Patterson

This course examines Judaism within a particular historical setting. The first two centuries of the Common Era saw the development of two related but distinct religious traditions during a time of political tension under Roman rule. These two traditions are Rabbinic Judaism and formative Christianity. This course explores the interaction between Jews and Christians during these decisive years. Using socio-scientific methods, we will try to foster our understanding of the various influences and issues that Jewish society had to face in light of both their need to recreate their religious identity after the destruction of the Temple and the appropriation of their religious ideas by early Christians.

DEATH AND DYING Room FG-B040
Instructor: Donald Boisvert

This course provides a comparative perspective on the variety of conceptions and practices related to death and dying that are found in different world religions. In addition, the course considers how people in contemporary North American society utilize traditional religious concepts and rituals, scientific understandings and medical procedures, or innovative combinations of ideas and practices to cope with, and make sense of, the problem of death. Lectures, discussions and some small group work will constitute the major teaching methods. Guest lecturers will be invited. Students should complete the course with some general understanding of, and critical appreciation for, the ways in which different religious traditions explain death and its attendant issues, and how these might assist individuals in coping with their own death or that of others.

Instructor: Sonia Zylberberg

T. 1800-2015
Room MH-B1

The Montreal Jewish community is unique in terms of its ethnic, denominational, political, linguistic and cultural composition. These many different groups and communities have resulted in a mix that is dynamic and vibrant, and have produced institutions that are world-renowned and have no equivalents elsewhere. This course will examine some of these institutions, along with the buildings, programs, groups and individuals that are located here. While focusing on the continuing connections to both the Jewish and the larger societies, the historical context will serve as the framework within which they are situated. Similarly, an emphasis on the central bodies will not preclude listening to marginal and minority voices as well. To accomplish all this, we will use a variety of media, including written texts, films, guest speakers, field trips and ritual participation.

Instructor: Donald Boisvert

Throughout the history of Quebec, at least until the relatively modern period, Catholicism and nationalism have functioned as important carriers of some sense of collective identity and purpose. This course will critically examine the historical, political and cultural manifestations of this symbiotic and often problematic relationship, with a particular emphasis on such questions as ideology and religious symbolism. It will raise larger issues with respect to the roles of religious belief, practice and institutions in the formation and maintenance of secular forms of nationalism.

WITCHCRAFT, MAGIC AND RELIGION Room H-920
(Selected Topics in Religion)
Instructor: Maria Mamfredis

In this course we will approach the study of magic, witchcraft and religion from a number of perspectives. We will begin with a review of the history of the academic study of the subject and an examination of whether the different explanations and definitions provided by scholars for magic, witchcraft and religion have led to a better understanding or misunderstanding of these. We will then explore a variety of practices which have been labelled as witchcraft and/or magic, beginning with examples from the ancient world, to indigenous cultures, Europe in the Middle Ages and concluding with contemporary movements. The first goal will be to understand how different cultures understand and explain the presence of witches, magicians and sorcerers in their midst. The second goal will be to understand how witches, magicians and sorcerers understand themselves. We will conclude the course with a re-examination of the evidence with the aim of better understanding the similarities and/or differences between witchcraft and magic on the one hand and religion on the other.

RELIGION AND VIOLENCE (Selected Topics in Religion) Room CL-214
Instructor: Marc Lalonde

It is often said that we live in a violent world but that religion represents the search for peace, love, and understanding. Yet considered historically, it is not unusual for religion to be a central factor in the inspiration and expression of violence. What, then, is the nature and character of the relationship between religion and violence? The purpose of this course is to explore this question on a number of different levels. It will examine the meaning of violence in its multiple forms (as physical, psychological, moral, ideological, etc.) at both the individual and social levels of existence. Within that framework, the course will compare and contrast various religious traditions in the course of their historical development as they relate to the theme and reality of violence. By examining their sacred writings, theologies, rituals and communal actions, this course will chart the diverse contributions of religious life and thought to both the perpetuation and resistance to human violence.

COMPARATIVE PHILOSOPHIES OF RELIGION
(Advanced Topics in Religion)
Instructor: Michael Oppenheim
Prerequisite: Permission of the department.

M. 1800-2015
Room H-437

This course will examine the main parameters and issues that define the emerging discipline or sub-discipline of comparative Philosophy of Religion. Put in another way, we explore the rich diversity of views of what constitutes comparative Philosophy of Religion.

The course will begin with an examination of this diversity and then study two possible methods for doing comparative work. The first is to take the traditional Western approach of Philosophy of Religion, but to insist that the material be global. The second approach is to focus on a particular concept, which in this case is the nature of the person, and to see the ways that this concept or analogous concepts are expressed in different cultures. Through this second approach, we will also begin to understand the great diachronic and synchronic variance that this important concept exhibits across cultures. The course will conclude by re-examining current understandings of the discipline, in light of our readings and discussions. This is a seminar-format course in which both upper-level undergraduate and graduate students will be participating. Note: Students who have received credit for this topic under a 498 number may not take this course for credit.

REBELLION AND MODERN JEWISH IDENTITY

(Advanced Topics in Religion)

Instructor: Norm Ravvin

Prerequisite: Permission of the department.

J. 1800-2015

Room LS-418-2

This course will focus on important and varied developments in modern Jewish culture and religious thought, which can be viewed as major upheavals, counter-traditions, or radicalisms in contrast with the Jewish mainstream. Our key subjects will include: Chasidism, Zionism, Yiddishism, Communism, the counterculture, the resurgence of contemporary orthodoxy. Among these are developments largely intrinsic to Jewish communal and cultural life, while others are linked with the broader cultural scene, whether that be the political context of nineteenth-century Europe or the social upheavals of the late 1960s and 1970s in America and abroad. Our challenge will be to understand these movements, their motivations, and to examine what they reflect about Jewish identity and culture as changing phenomena. We will read scholarly works, novels, journalism, and view documentary film to gain as clear a sense as we can of how the different developments constitute a particular kind of rebellion. The broad geographical focus will include Poland, France, Russia, pre-1948 Palestine, America and Canada. There will also be an effort to understand how certain secular radicalisms stand in for religious affiliation. This is a seminar-format course in which both upper-level undergraduate and graduate students will be participating.
