

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

Momus Emerging Critics Residency (2019)

The Faculty of Fine Arts invites applications for the new Momus Emerging Critics Residency. The 2019 residency is a one-week intensive summer program that will take place from August 26-30, 2019, at Concordia University, Montreal. The program will help foster the next generation of art writers through mentorship and practical skills development.

Fine Arts graduate students, as well as graduating and recently graduated students, are eligible to apply. Beyond Concordia, the program is open to paying participants, students and professionals, with a practice or keen interest in critical writing. The fee for this one-week residency is $625 CAD, and participants from out of town are responsible for travel and accommodation. If you are accepted, Momus Publisher Sky Goodden can assist with grant endorsements to cover the program's costs.
