Feminist and Queer Game Studies
Adrienne Shaw, Alexandrina Agloro, Josef Nguyen, Amanda Phillips, Bonnie Ruberg
LAST MODIFIED: 25 SEPTEMBER 2019
DOI: 10.1093/OBO/9780199756841-0235

Introduction

To date, there are no general overviews of feminist and queer game studies, though there are several core texts, edited collections, and special journal issues. Much of feminist game studies might more rightly be called women's game studies, as the feminist goals of the work were largely focused on ethnographic and qualitative scholarship on women and girls who play and make games. Research on masculinity in games comprises a much smaller subcategory of research. A related but separate thread of this work includes feminist analyses of game texts, as well as feminist critical game making praxis. Importantly, feminist game studies has existed for as long as game studies has been around (being formally named as such around the year 2000), questioning essentialist and hegemonic approaches to gender differences in game play and production. However, it took several years for feminist game scholarship on the whole to adopt an intersectional approach that could account for how gender, race, class, and other social categories are intertwined and co-constituted.

Critical Overviews and Core Texts

This section focuses on works that offer an important starting point for scholars entering these fields. Malkowski and Russworm 2017 and Ruberg and Shaw 2017, for example, provide critical overviews of the state of feminist and queer game studies. From a little over a decade earlier, Kerr 2006 offers an introduction and history of the study of game play and the game industry while King and Krzywinska 2006 offers a necessary introduction to the analysis of games as texts. Both touch on questions of gender—and in the latter case, race—in terms of who gets to make, play, and be represented in games but they importantly do so from a feminist perspective that includes analyses of power structures and the social constructions of gendered and racialized difference. In addition, Nakamura 2007, Everett and Watkins 2008, and Murray 2018 provide valuable theoretical insight into how digital spaces and texts (including but not limited to games) represent racialized and gendered difference, what these practices demonstrate about the industries that fashion them, and

Edited collections have been used to bring together a critical mass of feminist and queer game scholarship, as well as make it easier to teach courses on them. These volumes are able to cover a diversity of topics, methods, and perspectives under the broader umbrellas of feminist and queer theory. Some come out of conferences or workshops that bring together researchers, educators, journalists, activists, and game industry professionals. Others emerge from journalist and designer rather than academic perspectives. The three Barbie to Mortal Kombat anthologies, Cassell and Jenkins 2000; Kafai, et al. 2008; and Kafai, et al. 2016, for example, each came out of symposia though each was held in a different location, and they took place roughly ten years apart. They represent a snapshot of feminist game scholarship when they were written, as well as conversations about feminist game scholarship that have spanned the 2000s and 2010s. Similarly, Ruberg and Shaw 2017 came out of work presented at the first Queerness and Games Conference in 2013, with additional pieces invited from people who were not at the conference. Enevold and MacCallum-Stewart 2015 and Wysocki and Lauterla 2015 feature work on expressions of romance, sex, and
