Workshop Outline

It is now clear that the abolition of the Senate can only occur with a resolution of the Senate, of the House of Commons, and of the legislative assembly of each province. Meanwhile, a new government has expressed greater openness to the idea of non-constitutional reforms of the upper house. So what does this mean for the future of the Canadian Senate? What role does the Senate play in the lives of Canadians and why should we endeavor to seek reform in the first place?

In examining the origins of the Senate, its role vis à vis the House of Commons, and the various possible non constitutional reforms available that can improve its credibility, this workshop will illustrate the important part the Senate plays in Canada and how it even goes so far as saving Canadians from democracy.

- 1- Why was the Senate created in the first place?
 - a) Union of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick;
 - b) Representation of regions;
 - c) Bicameralism of the British Parliamentary model;
 - d) Counter-weight to the House of Commons
 - 2- The early Senate
 - a) 3 regions, 72 Senators;
 - b) Appointed for life;
 - c) Qualification for members in the Constitution;
 - d) Criteria for disqualification
 - 3- Development of the modern Senate
 - a) The role of government and the Senate, in the early years after Confederation;
 - b) Change that came with WWI;
 - c) Transformation continued with the Great Depression, WWII and the institution of social programs in the 60's.
 - 4- Senate Reform
 - a) Pressure for reform of the Senate, the anomaly of an appointed House
 - b) Reform proposals in the late 70's and 80's;
 - c) Constitution Act of 1982, no attempt to change the Senate;
 - d) Alienation of the West;
 - e) Meech Lake/Charlottetown;
 - 5- Harper's Government Efforts
 - a) 7 Bills
 - b) Québec reference
 - c) Supreme Court reference

6- Now what?

- a) Substantive reform needs support of provinces;
- b) Non-constitutional change possible-focus on appointment process;
- c) Constitutional reform need to look at relationship between the House of Commons and the Senate.
