

Call for Graduate Students: Lead and Design Student-Led Activities (2026)

Are you a graduate student looking to gain meaningful experience to strengthen your CV?
Do you have ideas for student-led activities that promote learning, engagement, and collaboration?

 The CSLP invites graduate students to design and lead activities for students, by students during the 2026 academic year.

This is a valuable opportunity to develop leadership, event planning, and facilitation skills—while making a lasting impact on your peers.

What We Offer:

- Guidance & Support - The CSLP team will support you throughout the planning and facilitation of your activity.
- Honoraria - Modest honoraria available for organizers and guest speakers.
- Event Space - A dedicated venue will be provided for in-person activities.
- Snacks Included - Because great ideas are even better with good snacks.

Who Can Apply?

We welcome proposals from graduate students with creative, inclusive, and engaging ideas that foster: student learning, peer connection, and community building.

Formats can include (but are not limited to): workshops, discussion or reading series, skill-building sessions, and panels or creative formats.

If you have an idea—we want to hear it.

How to Get Involved

 Submission deadline: January 16, 2026

To express interest or request further details, please contact Zeina Ismail-Allouche (zeina.ismailallouche@concordia.ca) by the deadline. Selected applicants will receive guidance on next steps and support to bring their ideas to life.

Boost your CV. Build new skills. Strengthen graduate community.

Let's make it happen—together.
