Still Making The World Dance highlights the rise and fall of one of history's most iconic and short-lived era's in music history -- DISCO.

The story primarily revolves around the Montreal music scene and focuses on the impact it had on both local and international levels. The story also highlights George Cucuzzella, founder of Unidisc Music & group of labels, and for the important role he played during this era.

We will be exploring the underground disco scenes which eventually evolved into hip-hop, techno, house, and its eventual evolution to where it plays today. We will be interviewing some of the original artists, musicians, producers, performers, engineers and labelowners, and all the way to current mainstream dance artists like David Guetta, Carl Cox and many more.

We are looking to assemble a team to surround us and embark on this musical journey together. We believe this story is important to music culture as a whole, especially Montreal and Canada's musical history. It simply must be told.
