Job Specific Requirements
Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This course is a seminar on a research topic of the instructor’s choosing. It should involve having students present and write about peer-reviewed publications on a topic in science.

The selected candidate will have a Ph.D. in either the physical or life sciences, demonstrated an independent research program (indicated by peer-reviewed publications) and teaching experience at the university level.

The application package must include course evaluations from other departments or institutions, an up to date CV, and a cover letter outlining the approach proposed to teaching this course.

Additional Comments
The purpose of this course is to introduce students to problems and areas of study which transcend traditional disciplinary barriers. A chosen area of investigation is treated from the viewpoint of various disciplines. Lectures from different areas may be used for this purpose. The aim is to show the contributions made by each field to the understanding of the problem, and how they complement each other.

- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

At least three years of professional experience as an active and recognized independent film animation director and animator. Professional experience in storyboarding, animating, directing and producing animated films using various animation techniques is required. Strong drawing and classical animation skills are required. Good working knowledge of various animation techniques such as drawing, stop-motion, under-camera. Must possess the knowledge to guide students through the entire learning process of basic under-camera and classical 2D animation techniques and introduce them to a first film animation production, from concept to completed film. Excellent working knowledge of the Adobe products (Premiere, Photoshop and After Effects), TV Paint software, and digital cameras is required. Basic knowledge of ProTools is an asset. This course is to be taught by a syllabus defined by the Film Animation program. BFA, MFA, or equivalent professional experience as an independent animation director required.

Additional Comments

If you have not successfully taught this course three (3) times or more, your application must include the following:

1. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
2. A statement that addresses how your professional practice qualifies you to teach this course
3. A statement that addresses your teaching approach/strategy for this course
4. Digital documentation of your artistic practice.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements
Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

As preparation for dance, this introductory course places emphasis on acquiring and consolidating the fundamentals of contemporary dance technique. This includes: proper alignment, placement and articulation of the body in stillness and in motion; coordination, suppleness, and strength for safe and efficient execution of exercises and dance sequences; developing clear and varied space-time choices based on kinetic awareness, weight transfers and directions, musicality and time structures including dynamics, phrasing, rhythm and textures.

Qualifications for the position include:
Must have been teaching for at least the last 5 years at the professional level and have a demonstrated commitment to the technical training of contemporary dancers. Demonstrated commitment entails: the applicant has developed and/or taught a syllabus that addresses current and new approaches for the technical development of contemporary dancers and/or course evaluations and/or assessments from university or professional schools; mentoring, coaching, consulting work for contemporary dancers in the professional milieu; professional development activities to sustain one's technical proficiency and skills; an ongoing involvement in the practice of contemporary dance, such as rehearsal direction, performance, interpretation. This should be indicated in a current curriculum vitae.

Must have a BFA degree in dance and/or certification and/or equivalent professional training in contemporary dance; and a documented ability to teach contemporary dance technique.

Language of instruction is English, bilingualism is an asset.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught DANC 205, DANC 305, or DANC 405 more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and

Academic Unit Head
Panet-Raymond, Silvy

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This posting is for a PT instructor to teach for 6.5 weeks of the course. They are expected to provide students with distinct, yet complementary skills to further their technical proficiency. More detail about those skills is given in the additional comments below.

This advanced course examines and tests physical and creative possibilities, emphasizing adaptability, autonomy and ingenuity in technical training. Priority is given to the exploration of movement principles in relationship to stimuli and catalysts external to the individual student e.g. an object, form, concept, or context. Through the creation of “movement situations” and obstacle challenges, the student confronts the unexpected – in movement, in relationship to others and with regards to their own learning techniques. The connections between physiology and behavior are seen as key to breaking patterns, cultivating new habits and preserving the health and longevity of the body in movement. Individual responsibility for learning, feedback and progress is fundamental to Fighting Monkey Practice.

Qualifications for the position include:

Must have been teaching for at least the last 5 years at the professional level and have a demonstrated commitment to the technical training of contemporary dancers; designated *Inspire by Fighting Monkey instructor; demonstrated teaching experience of the task-based principles of Fighting Monkey Zero Forms, Abstract Tools, and Co-ordinations; demonstrated ability to use play, problem solving, and creativity as tools to support the training of the body as a dynamically coordinated physical structure; at least 5 years’ experience at the professional level and an ongoing involvement in the practice of contemporary dance, such as rehearsal direction, performance, interpretation, movement education; a BFA degree in dance and/or certification and/or equivalent professional training in contemporary dance; and a documented ability to teach contemporary dance technique.

Language of instruction is English, bilingualism is an asset.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:

- a cover letter describing their qualifications indicating the pedagogical approach proposed to the course in light of the subject matter outlined above.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

This posting is for 50% of the teaching load, with the other 50% assigned to a FT faculty member. Assigned FT faculty member will teach for 6.5 weeks of the term. Artist-in-residence Peter Jasko will teach a hybrid form of technical training that combines notions of open dancing and principles of Flying Low training.

For the part-time faculty member’s portion of the course, priority will be given to the integration of contemporary dance technique and Fighting Monkey principles with regards to technical proficiency, artistry, dynamism, adaptability, body health and longevity. This includes task- based exercises that enable students to confront an object, another body (if the situation permits), or form, and respond with consideration for rhythm, body weight, tension / rigidity, interconnection of whole body, collaboration of upper and lower body, instinct, choice-making, and intelligence.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA or equivalent and are expected to be active in digital creative practices/productions. Applicants must have prior teaching experience in collaborative multimedia productions, specifically moving image and sound. Applicants must possess well-rounded knowledge of current work in sound design, video editing and motion graphics. Applicants must have good knowledge of relevant multimedia software.

Since there are multiple sections of this course, we ask applicants to teach the same content in order to provide consistency for the students. In addition, the applicant has to demonstrate his or her competence to teach the course for which they are applying reflecting the strategies and projects that students would undertake in pursuit of the key themes of the course as outlined in the description. Successful applicants will collaborate on the final course outline in order to provide consistency in content for students.

Job Specific Requirements
Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This studio course engages students in the study and application of key themes of visual communication in the context of Computation Arts. The course considers elements and principles of pattern, composition, layout, colour theory, typography, symbols, and diagrams, while conceptualizing strategies for successful communication of visual information. Optional topics include collage, paper folding, photography, and introductory analog electronics. This class is predominantly digital but discusses the relationships between analog and digital, as well as computational approaches.

This is a compulsory multi-section course in Computation Arts. As such, all sections must adhere to the course description including the elements and principles of visual communication, composition, and colour theory, within a conceptual framework. Applicants have to demonstrate his or her competence to teach the course for which they are applying reflecting teaching strategies as well as the projects that students would undertake in the course. Successful applicants will collaborate on the final course outline in order to provide consistency in content for the students.

Applicants must have a Masters degree or equivalent in graphic design or visual arts and must have a professional practice and/or teaching experience in visual communication.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This studio course develops students’ expertise in design research and support applications for the built environment, through specific sustainable projects and community initiatives. Students work in collaboration with different stakeholders in the research, conceptualization, construction, and analysis stages of project design.

This is a compulsory multi-section course in the Design Major and a continuation of Dart 391. As such, all sections must adhere to standard, core elements, including a common textbook, coordinated assessment procedures and common assignment submission formats, overseen by the departmental undergraduate program director. The teaching team is required to meet together on a weekly basis to ensure consistency in content and grading procedures for the students.

Instructors must have technical expertise in all aspects of silkscreen and fabric printing. In addition, instructors must be conversant in research methods, collaborative design practice and current theories in sustainability, external community building and environmental design.

Applicants must have a Masters degree or equivalent in experience for visual communication, screen print, print design, or textile design and must have a professional practice and/or teaching experience in collaboration and sustainability.

Please note that this represents 1/3 of the section.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

In this interdisciplinary course students creatively explore the intersection of arts, neuroscience, and society, and how these domains shape the understandings of ourselves and others. Concordia Fine Arts students work with the RI-MUHC Brain Research and Integrative Neuroscience program (BRaIN) and McGill Neuroscience students to create self-directed, collaborative projects, which converge artistic and scientific research.

Applicants must demonstrate their competence to teach the course for which they are applying.

Applicants must have a PhD in neuroscience. Previous teaching in crossdisciplinary art and science courses at the university level would be considered a strong asset. A professional practice or academic degree in the design field of visual communication would be considered a strong asset.

Applicants must have an ongoing working relationship with the RI-MUHC Brain Research and Integrative Neuroscience program (BRaIN).

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

TOPIC: Queer Theory

Master’s degree or equivalent in an appropriate field and demonstrated teaching and/or research record in Humanities, Gender & Sexuality Studies or a related and appropriate discipline. Strong familiarity with contemporary developments in queer theory and interdisciplinary approaches to reading queer histories, identity and representation is an asset, given the course materials.

Experience teaching high enrollment, elective (non-degree specialist) classes is an asset. Experience or ability teaching across methods of disciplinary inquiry and expanding upon course topics to relate to Queer Theory is an asset.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity and critical thinking in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV.

Additional Comments

This course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area and provides non-Fine Arts students the opportunity to explore areas of elective interest during their degree study. Students should expect exposure to contemporary scholarship in the relevant course area and to rigorous tools in critical inquiry. Classes should feature interdisciplinary approaches to the topic and opportunities to practice oral and written communication skills in course participation and assessments.

Academic Unit Head

Oppenheimer, Maya Rae

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

PhD in an appropriate field with interdisciplinary methods and demonstrated teaching experience across multiple disciplines and in high enrolment (250+ students) delivery modes. Disciplinary fluency is required across Cultural Studies, Queer and Sexuality Studies, Media and Film Studies. Demonstrated experience mentoring Teaching Assistants and running Teaching Assistant orientation workshops in addition to delivering lecture content is essential. Fluency across both French and English is an asset.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity, critical thinking and high enrolment teaching in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV. This high-enrolment, core requirement course for all Fine Arts undergraduate students runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies Area (FFAR). It is a six-credit course that stewards critical content delivery, teaching to assessments and adapting pedagogical remits to a broad range of student experiences, aptitudes and interests. The ethos of this course centres on introducing and practicing critical discussion of multi- and inter-disciplinary cultural practices with students. The course is designed to support students across various skill sets: writing about cultural works; discussing ideas and perspectives; building a linguistic and visual vocabulary of contemporary practices; asking critical questions; being a member of a learning community.

The post holder will co-teach a common curriculum with the FFAR Area Head/FFAR250 Coordinator and will be responsible for mentoring and liaising with students and a team of TAs.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

TOPIC: The Art of Film Animation

Master’s degree or equivalent in an appropriate field and demonstrated teaching and/or research record in Film and/or Animation Production, Film Studies, Media Studies or a related and appropriate discipline. Strong familiarity with histories and contemporary works of animation and developments in narrative, technique and genre are an asset.

Experience teaching high enrollment, elective (non-degree specialist) classes is an asset. This course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area: experience or ability teaching across methods of disciplinary inquiry and expanding upon course topics to relate to film animation is an asset.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity and critical thinking in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV.

Additional Comments

This course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area and provides non-Fine Arts students the opportunity to explore areas of elective interest during their degree study. Students should expect exposure to contemporary scholarship in the relevant course area and to rigorous tools in critical inquiry. Classes should feature interdisciplinary approaches to the topic and opportunities to practice oral and written communication skills in course participation and assessments.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

TOPIC: HIV/AIDS: An Interdisciplinary Introduction to Scientific, Social and Cultural Aspects

Master’s degree or equivalent in an appropriate field and demonstrated teaching and/or research record in Humanities, Social Science, Natural or Health Sciences. Strong familiarity with interdisciplinary approaches to teaching and learning histories and introductory issues to HIV/AIDS topics are an asset. Experience teaching high enrollment, elective (non-degree specialist) and online classes is an asset. This online course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area, via eConcordia: experience or ability teaching across methods of digital inquiry and expanding upon course topics to relate to contemporary HIV/AIDS discourses is an asset.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity and critical thinking in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV.

Teaching responsibilities: This is an asynchronous, online course offered through e-Concordia. The course is already developed: the lessons are already recorded, and the assignments are already determined. The instructor is responsible for managing the course. This specifically involves (1) becoming familiar with the existing course, (2) scheduling three live, online sessions—one before the Drop date, one in the middle of the course, and one close to finals to help students prepare for the final (additional sessions are also welcomed), (3) monitoring and contributing to the discussion board, (4) coordinating grading with the teaching assistants, and (5) grading assignments.

Additional Comments

Academic Unit Head

Oppenheimer, Maya Rae

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

TOPIC: Censoring Pop Culture/America

Master’s degree or equivalent in an appropriate field and demonstrated teaching and/or research record in Music History, Media Studies, Cultural Studies or a related and appropriate discipline. Strong familiarity with representation, politics and media history of Pop required, given the course area.

Experience teaching high enrollment, elective (non-degree specialist) classes is an asset. This course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area: experience or ability teaching across methods of disciplinary inquiry and expanding upon course topics to relate to current discourses of Media histories an asset.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity and critical thinking in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV.

Additional Comments

Special topics courses run out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area provide non-Fine Arts students the opportunity to explore areas of elective interest during their degree study. Students should expect exposure to contemporary scholarship in the relevant course area and to rigorous tools in critical inquiry. Classes should feature interdisciplinary approaches to the special topic and opportunities to practice oral and written communication skills in course participation and assessments.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Application Deadline

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

TOPIC: Hip Hop:Beats,Rhymes and Life

Master’s degree or equivalent in an appropriate field and demonstrated teaching and/or research record in Music History, Media Studies, Cultural Studies or a related and appropriate discipline. Strong familiarity with Hiphop culture required, including but not limited to histories of Hiphop, Canadian and American scenes, global impacts and production changes in the music industry.

Experience teaching high enrollment, elective (non-degree specialist) classes is an asset. This course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area: experience or ability teaching across methods of disciplinary inquiry and expanding upon course topics to relate to current discourses of and around Hiphop is also an asset, as would be a role in the music industry.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity and critical thinking in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV.

Additional Comments

Special topics courses run out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area provide non-Fine Arts students the opportunity to explore areas of elective interest during their degree study. Academic Unit Head
Oppenheimer, Maya Rae

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

TOPIC: The Culture of True Crime

Master’s degree or equivalent in an appropriate field and demonstrated teaching and/or research record in Humanities, Media Studies, Visual Culture or a related and appropriate discipline. Strong familiarity with histories and contemporary cultures of genre and various media platforms - from film, literature, non-fiction writing/biography, podcasting, documentary - are an asset.

Experience teaching high enrollment, elective (non-degree specialist) classes is an asset. This course runs out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area: experience or ability teaching across methods of disciplinary inquiry and expanding upon course topics to relate to histories of media and genre is an asset.

All applicants must submit a letter of intent (1 page max), a statement of teaching philosophy that clearly relates their candidacy to interdisciplinarity and critical thinking in their pedagogy (2 page max), a current CV.

Additional Comments

Special topics courses run out of the Fine Arts Interdisciplinary Studies area provide non-Fine Arts students the opportunity to explore areas of elective interest during their degree study. Students should expect exposure to contemporary scholarship in the relevant course area and to rigorous tools in critical inquiry. Classes should feature interdisciplinary approaches to the special topic and opportunities to practice oral and written communication skills in course participation and assessments.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Academic Unit Head
Corwin, Mark

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This posting is for the lecture portion and the winter portion of the two tutorials, instructor will be expected to collaborate with the studio (tutorial) instructor.

Course Description:

An introduction to electroacoustics, computer music and digital audio with applications to media and composition, focusing on those aspects of "sound art" that do not have pitch and meter at their core. This course is built around the Sonic Art/Acoustic tradition of electroacoustics. The potential of digital media and recent technologies will be explored. While focusing on the computer and media aspects of sound through creative projects and critical listening, there will be a survey of the roots and scientific bases of this field, including history, acoustics and psychoacoustics.

The students will write research Reports on the topics presented in the Lectures. Some will be presented collaboratively.

Among the topics to be presented in depth are:
– an introduction to the voice and phonetics
– an introduction to acoustics – hearing; hearing loss
– detailed analysis of a <3 minute work
– structural / compositional analysis of a work from the 1950s / 1960s
– a detailed introduction to modular synthesis modeled on the modular analog synthesizer in the Studio [the Dopefer], and a virtual equivalent system – such as the VCV rack, https://vcvrack.com
– an extensive analysis of Kontakte by Stockhausen
– soundscape – conception, analysis, composition, production
– live/mixed ea – conception, analysis, composition, production
– auditory perception
– non-traditional historical streams
– the loudspeaker in society and culture
– creativity, thinking and identity
– contemporary idioms and media

Academic/Professional Qualifications

• Experience teaching digital audio manipulation through software such as Amadeus, Cecilia, SoundHack, AudioMulch, Spear, MetaSynth, Logic, Pro Tools, etc. on Macintosh and Windows platforms;
• Experience with multi-media applications of sound (Web-based applications, audio streaming, compression and copyright issues);
• Experience with analysis and criticism of student and professional electroacoustic compositions;
• Experience with digital editing software such as Pro Tools, Amadeus, Logic, Ableton-Live, Audio Sculpt, etc.;
• A knowledge of and experience in the ‘ea’ tradition as taught at Concordia is a strong asset;
• Basic knowledge of psychoacoustics;
• A strong knowledge of the history of electroacoustics and sound technology as applicable to computer music and digital audio;
• Knowledge and experience in sound projection systems and audio mixing (analog and digital);
• A strong contemporary knowledge of the practice of media production and dissemination – CDs and the Web is an asset;
• Knowledge and experience of contemporary ‘art’ issues, including, but not limited to ‘feminist critique’, post modernism, and the influences and impact of ‘pop culture’.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments
Course Description:
This posting is for the lecture portion (full year) and the Winter portion of both Tutorials, 1.5 credits for each. The instructor will be expected to collaborate with the Fall tutorial instructor.

A seminar/workshop in electroacoustics introducing composition through analysis and directed studies involving recording, editing, processing of analog and digital signals, a full introduction to live and mixed electroacoustic composition, and modular analog synthesis, as possible, all in a multi-channel environment.

Additional Information:
This course is an introduction to electroacoustics, computer music and digital audio with applications to media and composition, focusing on those aspects of “sound art” that do not have pitch and meter at their core. This course is built around the Sonic Art/Acousmatic tradition of electroacoustics. The potential of digital media and recent technologies will be explored. - Knowledge of the course as taught at Concordia is an asset;
- Highly developed interactive classroom skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Course Description:
This introductory course provides an overview of analog and digital audio technology with attention to its innovations, history, and effect on the practice of sound recording and involves a classroom-based study of issues related to sound recording.

Course Emphasis:
The class is primarily lecture based with a strong emphasis on technical aspects of recording, and listening.

Topics to be Covered include:
1. Acoustics
   - Basic Acoustics: Sound and Vibration: types of sound waves, properties of sound waves.
   - Sound Propagation: Wave behaviour, Reflection, Refraction, Diffraction, Speed of sound etc.
2. Signal Flow and Electronics
   - Basic Audio Theory: Electricity: Ohm’s Law, Impedance, Resistance, Electrical Circuits, Grounding.
   - Microphones: Transducers, Microphone pick-up patterns, Microphone Applications, Field Recording assignment(s).
   - Signal Flow/Transduction: Recording Process and Studio, Recording Processes and their relevance to current techniques, Studio Technique.
   - Digital formats: sampling rate, conversion, audio file formats

Additional Topics / Exercises
- Critical Listening to Recorded Audio (multiple genres), and to the Sound of our Environment,
- Protecting Your Hearing

Additional Information
This is a lecture course. No studio resources are provided. It is a foundational introductory course in recording and sound reinforcement theory basics including acoustics, psychoacoustics, equipment (analog and digital, including software and plugins), and critical listening. It is the first of two single semester courses (EAST 251 and 252) preparing students for future hands-on work in studio and concert recording environments.
Additional Information
Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Demonstrated experience and skills in the theory and practice of recording and sound reinforcement;
- Evidence of advanced work in recording and sound reinforcement;
- Tonneister or equivalent a definite asset;
- Demonstrated knowledge and experience in digital and analog recording theory and practice;
- Prepared to work with contemporary technologies;
- Experience in successful co-teaching essential to the course;
- Demonstrated skills in teaching students with a wide variety of backgrounds;
- Knowledge of styles and repertoire;
- Concert production experience;
- Demonstrated experience in teaching related computer skills with the following sound editing and manipulation software: Pro Tools, Logic, Audacity, Nuendo, Amadeus, CoolEdit, WaveLab, etc, and associated VST, RTAS, and AU plug-ins such as Waves, Sonalksis, iZotope RX and Ozone.
- Knowledge of the course as taught at Concordia is an asset.
- Highly developed interactive classroom skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:

Course Description:
A continuation of EAST 251

A lecture course. A continuing introductory course in recording and sound reinforcement theory basics including acoustics, psychoacoustics, equipment (analog and digital, including software and plugins), and critical listening. The second of two single semester courses preparing students for future hands-on work in studio and concert recording environments.

Course Emphasis:
The class is primarily lecture based with a strong emphasis on technical aspects of recording, and listening.

Topics to be Covered include:
1. Mic’ing-Capturing Sounds:
   - Review of absorption and Reflection… understanding acoustics in preparation for recording.
   - Standard instrument mic’ing techniques: microphone selection, placement, proper use.
   - Stereo mic’ing techniques: X/Y, ORTF, coincident pairs, Blumlein, binaural, spaced omnis, M/S, Decca tree.
   - Surround mic’ing: Surround Decca tree, Ambisonic, Holophonic, M/S-surround. Field recording enhancements (possibility of a field recording kit building workshop outside of class). Microphone pre-amplification, introduction to the mixer input strip. Bleed: how to use leakage to your advantage and avoid phase cancelation issues.
2. Recording:
   - Media, gain structure, levels, distortion, dynamics: introduction to compression, equalization, etc.
3. Mixing:
   - Pan, balance, stereo field, surround,
   - Time-based effects,
   - Pitch-based effects,
   - Equalization,
   - Dynamics.
4. Mastering: Frequency content, dynamics, M/S techniques.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This posting is for the Tonal and Metric portion only, on Tuesdays only, from 10:45-12:15 a.m. This is a 50% posting.

Course Description:

This course is a continuation of EAST 200 based upon the principles of auditory scene analysis and critical listening. It extends the development of fundamental aural skills critical to students in electroacoustics. The course integrates electroacoustic analysis with music technology through detailed study of representative electroacoustic works. A number of digital studio techniques, such as envelopes, EQ, compression, reverb, and time stretching/pitch shifting, are also studied in this context.

The course is comprised of two components, each given on a different day of the week: (1) ASA-inspired aural training through analysis of EA repertoire, and (2) tonal and metric aural training within a creative context. It will be coordinated with the ASA portion as well as the Theory and MIDIstration course (EAST 310).

Academic/Professional Qualifications

• Demonstrated experience teaching traditional aural perception and ear training;
• Demonstrated experience and advanced skills in using signal processing plugins and automation;
• Demonstrated experience and skills in theory and practice of music notation/playback software including Finale, Sibelius, and others;
• Demonstrated experience and skills in instrument sample software (NI Kontakte and others);
• Evidence of creative and compositional exercises in developing musical skills, and the methods of evaluating them;
• A background in composition is a definite asset;
• Knowledge of contemporary styles and repertoire, including, but not limited to, concert, popular, rock, dance and electronic/electronica;
• Knowledge of sound and music practices from numerous cultures;
• Demonstrated skills in teaching students from a wide variety of sound and music backgrounds;
• Experience in successful, on-going communication with other instructors in a collegial and cooperative fashion is essential to the course;
• Knowledge of the highly integrated approach to education in electroacoustic studies as taught at Concordia is an asset;
• Highly developed interactive classroom skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Course Description:

This posting is for the lecture section portion (full year) of the course and the fall portion of both Tutorials.

A seminar/workshop in electroacoustics with continued work in composition, history, and sound technology. Technological developments, computer applications, MIDI, and contemporary techniques are explored in depth through a series of directed studies involving digital signal processing, multi-track studio techniques, digital synthesis and sampling.

This course is a continuation of EAST 205 Electroacoustics I

Coordination with the lecture instructor is required.

Within a broadly aesthetic, technical and academic context, a range of creative and compositional models will be explored. Students will present regularly reflecting on the growing diversity of objectives and voices in the class. Through hybrid pedagogical structures the instructor will introduce topics for research and encourage students to present examples of their on-going original artistic growth and evolution.

Where possible, students will be encouraged to present their thoughts on their own work, those of their classroom peers, and notable [and even unknown] members of the general electroacoustic community. Students will be encouraged to work independently and in small collaborative groups.

Academic/Professional Qualifications:

• Experience in teaching EA composition and performance in highly individualized, project-based settings
• Experience and advanced skills in audio software, including digital audio editors (Amadeus Pro, Adobe Audition), and Digital audio workstation (Pro Tools, Logic, Reaper), and signal processing plugins.
• Experience with analysis and criticism of electroacoustic compositions
• A knowledge of and experience in the 'ea' tradition as taught at Concordia is a strong asset.
• Knowledge and experience in multi-channel sound projection systems and audio mixing (analog and digital).
• Experience with multi-media applications of sound (Web-based applications, audio streaming, interactive audio)
• A strong knowledge of the history of electroacoustics and sound technology as applicable to computer music and digital audio
• Basic knowledge of psychoacoustics
• Knowledge of and experience with contemporary 'art' issues, including, but not limited to 'feminist critique', post-modernism and the influences and impact of 'pop culture'
• Experience with modular synthesis and programming environment (Max/MSP, Pure Data, Supercollider, NI Reaktor, and others) is an asset.
• Highly developed interactive classroom skills

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

This posting is for the lecture section (full year) and only the Fall semester of the tutorials, 1.5 credits for each.

Course Description:

A seminar/workshop in electroacoustics with continued work in fixed media, live, mixed and interdisciplinary composition, and sound design.

Additional Comments

Course Description:
An intensive seminar/workshop studying the techniques used to record and edit music in settings ranging from live concert performances to studio session recordings. Hands-on experience and aural perception is developed during ensemble rehearsal and recording sessions. Emphasis is placed on production topics such as multi-track recording, microphone placement systems, and audio processes. An understanding is developed of the language of music through basic music appreciation skills as they relate to recording and editing of music.

Additional Informations:
This is the first of two single semester courses preparing students in the studio practice of the recording art.

Students and the incumbent will be collaborating with the 8 music Ensembles (University and Chamber Choir, Chamber Ensemble, Jazz Choir, Jazz Band, Eclectic Ensemble, and Jazz Improvisation I and II) for the delivery of virtual ensembles, at the end of the semester, as a component of the final outcomes of all courses. Close collaboration with both sets of instructors is required. Students and teachers of EAST 351 will work with the students and teachers of the ensembles in the preparation and delivery of guide tracks for individual practice, and eventually, the highest quality recordings of the various musicians in the ensembles into virtual ensemble videos. The number of works to be completed will be determined by the instructors.

- Knowledge of the course as taught at Concordia is an asset
- Highly developed interactive classroom skills

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Information

Course Description:
A continuation of EAST 351

Additional Information:

• An intensive hands-on seminar/workshop studying the techniques used to record and edit music in settings ranging from live concert performances to studio session recordings. Hands-on experience and aural perception is developed during ensemble rehearsal and recording sessions. Emphasis is placed on production topics such as multitrack recording, microphone placement systems and audio processes. An understanding of the language through basic music appreciation skills as they relate to recording and editing of music is developed. This is the second of two single semester courses preparing students in the studio practice of the recording art.

Students and the incumbent will be collaborating with the 8 music Ensembles (University and Chamber Choir, Chamber Ensemble, Jazz Choir, Jazz Band, Eclectic Ensemble, and Jazz Improvisation I and II) for the delivery of virtual ensembles, at the end of the semester, as a component of the final outcomes of all courses. Close collaboration with both sets of instructors is required. Students and teachers of EAST 351 will work with the students and teachers of the ensembles in the preparation and delivery of guide tracks for individual practice, and eventually, the highest quality recordings of the various musicians in the ensembles into virtual ensemble videos. The number of works to be completed will be determined by the instructors.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Experience in teaching EA composition and performance in highly individualized, project-based settings
- Experience and advanced skills in audio software, including digital audio editors (Amadeus Pro, Adobe Audition), and Digital audio workstation (Pro Tools, Logic, Reaper), and signal processing plugins.
- Experience with analysis and criticism of electroacoustic compositions
- A knowledge of and experience in the ‘ea’ tradition as taught at Concordia is a strong asset.
- Knowledge and experience in multi-channel sound projection systems and audio mixing (analog and digital).
- Experience with multi-media applications of sound (Web-based applications, audio streaming, interactive audio)
- A strong knowledge of the history of electroacoustics and sound technology as applicable to computer music and digital audio
- Basic knowledge of psychoacoustics
- Knowledge of and experience with contemporary ‘art’ issues, including, but not limited to ‘feminist critique’, post-modernism and the influences and impact of ‘pop culture’
- Experience with modular synthesis and programming environment (Max/MSP, Pure Data, Supercollider, NI Reaktor, and others) is an asset.
- Highly developed interactive classroom skills

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Preamble:

The three courses, EAST 361, 406 and 461 are cross-listed. The class meets in a lecture-seminar format in which students regularly present their work for commentary and critique by the instructor and other students. As appropriate, the instructor will present ideas and information that will focus on specific topics relevant to all of the classes. These may include such areas as aesthetics, composition, research, the use of space, sound in mediatic arts, site specific / soundscape, cross-disciplinary practices etc.

Being research and practice based, the three courses will have elements of each however, with different weights in each of the areas, such as:
* 361 & 365, 40-50% research, 50-60% studio practice;
* 406 & 407, 15-25% research, 75-85% studio practice;
* 461 & 462, 10% research, 90% studio practice.

Being intermediate, senior and graduation-level projects, the exact application of the term would need to be broadly defined, including for example, fixed media composition, installations, interactive and live performance, cross-disciplinary work, creation of virtual instruments / virtual environments etc.

Course Description:

Topics vary from year to year, but may include such elements as glitch, noise, microsound, PI*nderphonics, collage, game sound, and ring tones.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Extensive familiarity with jazz performance and jazz writing traditions;
- Highly developed skills in aural and written transcription;
- Experience teaching aural skills and an understanding of the learning process in developing the musical ear;
- Prepared to work within a coordinated teaching environment, to incorporate and encourage the use of appropriate technologies;
- Demonstrated skills in teaching students with a wide variety of backgrounds in medium-size classes;
- Highly-developed interactive classroom skills;
- Intermediate level keyboard skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Course Description:
A course designed to develop the jazz musical ear at an intermediate level. Classroom and laboratory.

Additional Information:
Jazz Aural Perception I is the foundation course for the education of the ear within the context of a wide range of jazz music. Students will improve their skills in reading and hearing through speaking, singing, instrumental playing, keyboard work, transcriptions, and a variety of dictation modalities presenting melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic material.

In addition to the development of fluency in intervals, scales, chords and harmonic progressions, students should be encouraged to hear inner voice lines, to easily identify harmonic motion (circle of fifths), to work with progressively complex rhythmic material, and to begin to understand the concept of “sonic signature”.

Coordination with the teacher of JAZZ 200 (Language of Jazz) and JAZZ 252 (Harmony I) is important to ensure that essential materials are covered and duplication avoided.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)

Additional Comments

Course Description:
A continuation of the development of the jazz musical ear through intermediate-level sight-singing, sight reading, aural transcription, written transcription, aural analysis, keyboard skill development, rhythmic exercises, and individual instrumental work.

Additional Information:
Jazz Aural Perception II continues the education of the ear within the context of a wide range of jazz music. Students will improve their skills in reading and hearing through speaking, singing, instrumental playing, keyboard work, transcriptions, and a variety of dictation modalities presenting melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic material.

Building on an increasing fluency in intervals, scales, chords and harmonic progressions, students should be encouraged to hear and transcribe outer and inner voice lines with confidence, work with more complex rhythms and harmonic progressions, and deepen their understanding of “sonic signature”, forward motion, and structure.

Coordination with the teachers of JAZZ 200 (Language of Jazz), and JAZZ 351 (Jazz Harmony II) is important to ensure that essential materials are covered and duplication avoided.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Course Description:

Prerequisite: JAZZ 252. The study of writing arrangements based upon compositions from the American popular song and jazz repertoires for small and medium-size jazz ensembles.

Additional Information:

This course examines techniques for harmonizing melodies, voicing, building in the rhythm section, creating a variety of forms, developing primary and secondary focus. Instrumental ranges and balance, correct notation, and a variety of jazz stylings will be studied through listening, analysis, and writing. Final projects may be performed and/or recorded, as organised by the course instructor.

Students must learn to lay out scores and create parts using digital music notation software, preferably Sibelius. Skills in the use of this software for arranging and in teaching are necessary to prepare the students for the professional environment.

Academic/Professional Qualifications:

- Documented and extensive body of work as a jazz arranger for a wide variety of ensembles and styles;
- Wide-ranging knowledge of jazz writing traditions;
- Demonstrated success teaching jazz arranging at the university level;
- Demonstrated experience in the use of contemporary technologies in the classroom;
- Prepared to work within a coordinated teaching environment;
- Demonstrated skills in teaching students with a wide variety of backgrounds in medium-size classes;
- Highly-developed interactive classroom skills;
- Intermediate level keyboard skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

This course normally has the possibility of either a concert performance or a closed recording session on the date listed below. Despite this, due to the COVID-19 pandemic it is not likely that there will be a Fall concert presentation at the Oscar Peterson Concert Hall. Should concerts and in-person ensemble performances be possible though, take note of the scheduled date, as agreeing to this date is a condition of the teaching position.

Fall Concert December 18, 2020 - or recording on the same day

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
• Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Course Description:

Prerequisite: JAZZ 303. Building on JAZZ 303, the study of writing arrangements for large ensembles including original compositions and jazz repertoire.

Additional Information:

This course builds on the techniques learned in Arranging I with larger ensembles, more forms and styles, and with more extensive writing assignments. Use of instrumental combinations, and the effects of arranging decisions will be studied through listening, analysis, and writing. Final projects may be performed and/or recorded, as organised by the course instructor.

Students must use digital music notation software, preferably Sibelius. Skills in the use of this software for arranging and in teaching are necessary to prepare the students for the professional environment.

Academic Unit Head

Corwin, Mark

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Extensive familiarity with jazz performance and jazz writing traditions;
- Highly developed skills in aural and written transcription;
- Experience teaching aural skills and an understanding of the learning process in developing the musical ear;
- Demonstrated skills in successfully teaching aural skills in jazz traditions, including sight-reading, dictation, intonation, transcription, and development of aural recall;
- Prepared to work within a coordinated teaching environment, to incorporate and encourage the use of appropriate technologies;
- Demonstrated skills in teaching students with a wide variety of backgrounds in medium-size classes;
- Highly-developed interactive classroom skills;
- Intermediate level keyboard skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for,
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Course Description:

A continuation of jazz aural perception development at an advanced level. Classroom and laboratory.

Additional Information:

A continuation of the development of the jazz musical ear through advanced-level sight-singing, sight reading, aural transcription, written transcription, aural analysis, keyboard skill development, rhythmic exercises, and individual instrumental work.

Jazz Aural Perception III continues the education of the ear within the context of a wide range of jazz music. Students will improve their skills in reading and hearing through speaking, singing, instrumental playing, keyboard work, transcriptions, and a variety of dictation modalities presenting melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic material. Building on an increasing fluency in intervals, scales, chords and harmonic progressions, students should be encouraged to read, hear and transcribe complex melodies, rhythms and harmonic progressions, and deepen their understanding of “sonic signature”, forward motion, and structure.

Coordination with the teacher of JAZZ 352 (Jazz Analysis) is important to ensure that essential materials are covered and duplication avoided.

- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Course Description:
A study of the historical contributions to jazz music made by guitarists in the context of musical, historical, and political developments. Students will learn through listening, reading, class discussions, and analysis.

The department has a set syllabus or outline for this course, which the incumbent will be expected to adhere to. Should you wish to consult the syllabus/outline prior to your application, please see the document at http://www.concordia.ca/finearts/music/about/jobs.html

Since this is a new course, you must submit a letter of intent, statement of teaching philosophy, a curriculum vitae, and documentation of your artistic production. You are expected to demonstrate your technical, digital, critical, and / or theoretical expertise, in your Academic and Professional Services Dossier, or in the materials submitted with your application.

The student evaluations must use the following rubric:

Listening Quizzes 45%, Class Participation 10%, Listening Journal 15%, Research essay 30%

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Additional Comments

Course Description:

A performance course in which students participate in the Concordia Big Band. End of semester concerts are required.

This course has historically run as a big band. However, due to changing student demographics, the course must run as a chamber ensemble. The professor must be able to adapt scores provided by the department for the specific needs of the ensemble. 6-8 NEW pieces must be taught EACH semester and end of semester concerts are required.

Students and the incumbent of this ensemble will be collaborating virtually with the second-year recording class, EAST 351/2 and 352/4, to provide support for online participation in this course. Principally they will be assisting in the creation and delivery of virtual ensembles, at the end of the semester, as a component of the final outcomes of all courses. Close collaboration with both sets of instructors is required. Students and teachers of EAST 351 will work with the students and teachers of the ensembles in the preparation and delivery of guide tracks for individual practice, and eventually, the highest quality recordings of the various musicians in the ensembles into virtual ensemble videos. The number of works to be completed will be determined by the instructors.

This course normally has a mandatory and required concert performance on the dates listed below. Despite this, due to the COVID-19 pandemic it is not likely that there will be a Fall concert presentation at the Oscar Peterson Concert Hall. Should concerts be possible though, take note of these scheduled dates, as agreeing to those dates are a condition of the teaching position.

Fall Concert November 25, 2020
Winter Concert March 31, 2021

Additional Comments

Course Description
Students enrolled in this course participate in the Chamber Choir. Repertoire should be challenging and represent a broad spectrum of musical styles or periods. End of semester concerts are required.

Students and the incumbent of this ensemble will be collaborating virtually with the second-year recording class, EAST 351/2 and 352/4, to provide support for online participation in this course. Principally they will be assisting in the creation and delivery of virtual ensembles, at the end of the semester, as a component of the final outcomes of all courses. Close collaboration with both sets of instructors is required. Students and teachers of EAST 351 will work with the students and teachers of the ensembles in the preparation and delivery of guide tracks for individual practice, and eventually, the highest quality recordings of the various musicians in the ensembles into virtual ensemble videos. The number of works to be completed will be determined by the instructors.

This course normally has a mandatory and required concert performance on the dates listed below. Despite this, due to the COVID-19 pandemic it is not likely that there will be a Fall concert presentation at the Oscar Peterson Concert Hall. Should concerts be possible though, take note of these scheduled dates, as agreeing to those dates are a condition of the teaching position.

Concert shared with the Concordia University Choir MPER 223/3
Fall Concert December 8, 2020
Winter Concert April 28, 2021

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Masters in music, or at least 3 years’ experience at the professional level teaching music theory.
- Extensive familiarity with harmonic languages in a wide variety of musical styles;
- Developed analytical skills for the examination of, and explanation of, the works and materials covered in the course;
- Demonstrated success in teaching foundation harmony courses at the undergraduate level;
- Prepared to work with collegial and innovative approaches to overcome specific individual and group problems;
- Prepared to work within a coordinated teaching environment, to incorporate and encourage the use of contemporary technologies;
- Highly-developed interactive classroom skills;
- Intermediate-level keyboard skills.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Course Description
An introduction to the basic and intermediate principles of harmonic progressions and voice-leading within the tonal system, with reference to a variety of styles and genres, studied through analysis and composition.

Additional Information:
Students should advance to the level of beginning chromatic harmony: secondary dominants, chromatic chords such as the augmented sixth and Neapolitan, and simple common chord modulation should be introduced. The instructor is expected to work with other part-time and full-time faculty in the area to enhance connections between this course and those in aural perception, analysis, the next level of harmony, and/or composition.

MUSI 251 - Harmony 1 - Required Objectives
This is a coordinated course with prescribed learning outcomes. This course focuses on the basics of tonal harmony, as it was commonly practiced in the classical and early romantic periods, while tying it with contemporary examples from pop/film music whenever possible. At the end, students should be able to understand and analyze pieces such as Bach’s Prelude in C (WTC 1) or Mozart’s Rondo Alla Turca. All material in the class should be examined both in writing exercises (4-parts figured bass) and analysis exercises.

Details of specific required topics can be found at the Department http://www.concordia.ca/finearts/music/about/jobs.html "MUSI 251 - Harmony I - Required Objectives"

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Masters in music, or at least 3 years experience at the professional level teaching music theory.
- Deep familiarity with melodic shaping forces and methods of analysis
- Deep familiarity with species, free, tonal counterpoint (modal an asset)
- Knowledge of melodic and contrapuntal repertoire across instrumentation, genres and periods
- Ability to demonstrate at the keyboard, ability to sing
- Experience teaching medium-to-large classes with students of varying backgrounds
- Highly-developed interactive classroom skills, including motivating students to play and sing in groups or alone
- Experience teaching in a networked collegial way in a coordinated teaching environment

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Course Description:
An introduction to the basic elements of melodic construction and contrapuntal technique, with reference to a variety of genres, studied through analysis and composition.

The first counterpoint class aims to give the student basic understanding of melodic structures, of the difference between foreground and background, and basic control of dissonance in music writing. The course requires regular writing exercises to develop reflexes, but these must be also complemented by musical analysis. The first-year course focuses on two-part counterpoint, while three- and four-part counterpoint is covered in the second year course.

Specific required topics to be covered:
- Strict counterpoint in two parts, from 1st to 5th species against a 1st species cantus firmus.
- Two-part strict counterpoint where both voices are in 5th species.
- Two-part invertible counterpoint.
- Two-part canons.

Listening, analysis, playing, singing, and writing. Materials will cover a wide variety of time periods, instruments, and genres including contemporary and Canadian sources. Materials may also be drawn from non-classical and non-traditional sources. Students will be expected to play keyboard and to sing.

Corwin, Mark

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Course Description:

This course will build students’ skills in songwriting through composition of music and lyrics, melodic and rhythmic transcription, critical analysis, arranging and other recording production-related considerations, performance, and peer critique. By the end of the course each student will have written several new complete songs, and had an opportunity for public performance and/or demo recording of at least one song.

Academic / Professional Qualifications:

• Extensive familiarity with current songwriting and its traditions including Canadian and Québécois materials and traditions;
• Extensive experience in writing and performing songs;
• Ability to accompany on guitar or piano for performance of student compositions and repertoire to be studied in class;
• Broad familiarity with the harmonic and melodic language of songwriting;
• Ability to guide students in idea generation and lyric writing, including the use of literary techniques;
• Developed analytical skills for the examination and explanation of the works and materials covered in the course;
• Demonstrated skills in teaching students with a wide variety of backgrounds.
• Highly developed interactive classroom skills.
• Able to incorporate and encourage the use of contemporary technologies.

Please include with your application:

A selection of scores, lead-sheets, recordings, or other material evidence of your song-writing production. A statement of teaching intents for this course, and a current curriculum vitae/professional dossier which demonstrates your relevant expertise.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

This course normally has the possibility of either a concert performance or a closed recording session on the date listed below. Despite this, due to the COVID-19 pandemic it is not likely that there will be a Fall concert presentation at the Oscar Peterson Concert Hall. Should concerts and in-person ensemble performances be possible though, take note of the scheduled date, as agreeing to this date is a condition of the teaching position.

Spring Concert April 28, 2021 - or recording on same day

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

• Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
• Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
• If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
• Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

This course has been designed to provide all Studio Arts students with a comprehensive set of professional skills that they will require to practice their art once they graduate. Some of these are, for example, grant writing and making submissions to alternative and commercial galleries. In addition, the course will examine, in depth, the politics, economy, and sociology of various "artworlds" in which the emerging artists may find themselves working in

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

ARTX 480 is an advanced studio course where students develop a mature self-directed body of work. The content and context of the class is diverse and open with students using a wide range of approaches to, and methodologies for, contemporary art production. The focus of the course is individual studio research and exploration, and articulation of concepts and ideas. In the second semester class members collaborate to produce a collective public presentation of their work.

Course content will be adapted to on-line learning and will encourage resourceful, off-campus approaches to art making.

Additional Comments

Special Topic: WALKING PRACTICES
COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020, ASEM courses will be taught remotely. Access to campus will be determined by, and subject to, government regulations.

When Walter Benjamin revisited Charles Baudelaire’s writings on the crowds and tumult of Paris of in the 19th century, he highlighted the flâneur, slow-strolling the grand arcades, as a specific figure of modernity and an emblem of its urban cast. From the flâneur to the avant-garde of the 20th century to the present day, forms of walking in the city, and further afield, have provided inspiration for artistic intervention in the structures and habits of contemporary life. From Dada’s program of random wanderings to Surrealist deambulations, from the Situationist dérives and psycho-geographic calculations to the wanderings of Land artists in the 1980s to conceptual and performative walks, from structured audio walks to unstructured urban perambulations, from GPS art maps to the diverse (and ever expanding) forms of the present day, walking has provide a rich medium for exploring the relationship between the body, movement and social/public space; for cultural intervention; and for an experiential mode of perception and encounter. This course aims to create a mobilization, and a theorization, of walking activities as critical forms of urban investigation that enact an uncustomary mapping of social space. The course incorporates our own walks in the city.

Special Topic: RETHINKING AESTHETICS

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020, ASEM courses will be taught remotely. Access to campus will be determined by, and subject to, government regulations.

During the past ten years aesthetics has received renewed attention in the visual arts having languished or been studiously avoided for decades owing to what were considered as adverse canonical affiliations. This seminar looks at the renewed interest with respect to making, experiencing and valuing contemporary art. Topics include: a) the emphasis on affect studies, b) the links between aesthetic experience and cultural identity c) Manovich’s notion of digital aesthetics, d) the search for new concepts, evident for example, in Sianne Ngai’s work “Aesthetic Categories” and Richard Shusterman’s "somaesthetics" and e) the possible rehabilitation of traditional aesthetic theories that are medium specific or propose a unified approach to matters of intent, emotion and practice.

Additional Comments
Special Topic: WRITING PROJECTS
COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020, ASEM courses will be taught remotely. Access to campus will be determined by, and subject to, government regulations.

This seminar is a writing-intensive class for students who are prepared to complete a substantial writing project over the course of the semester. The emphasis will be on writing projects as creative practice. It is ideal for students who wish to write a narrative or poetic text to accompany a visual project or performance; a section or draft of a screenplay; the text for an artist's book; sound pieces; selections of poems; or a short story.

During the first month of class, our focus will be split between in-class writing exercises, discussions of practical strategies for writing, and conversations about a diverse set of readings designed to stimulate thinking and build community in the classroom. For the remainder of the course, the emphasis will be on the production and review of individual writing projects. In each class, students will workshop the writing-in-progress of two of their colleagues – in a workshop, the writer listens in silence while readers discuss, in an in-depth, guided way, their experiences of the writer’s work.

Special Topic: MAKING WRITING

This seminar is a writing-intensive class for students who are prepared to develop a substantial piece of writing in relation to artistic practice. It is ideal for students who wish to write their thesis statement, an extended artist statement, artist talk, catalogue text, or critical/creative essay.

During the first five weeks of the course, we will come together to do writing exercises, discuss practical research and writing strategies, and talk about a diverse set of readings designed to stimulate thinking and build community in the classroom. For the remainder of the course, the emphasis will be on the production and review of individual writing projects. In each class, students will workshop the writing-in-progress of two of their colleagues – in a workshop, the writer listens in silence while readers discuss, in an in-depth, guided way, their experiences of the writer’s work.

Additional Comments

Special Topic: FAST TRACKING THE PAST

More than ever before history has become a critical factor in contemporary art practice. The past as a source of aesthetic and formal influence or deliberate reproduction continues unabated while history as a focus of research and as specific content is much more considerable. Take, for example, a recent issue of Canadian Art that is devoted to historical events and to historical projects by artists, the preponderance of work in documenta 14 and the rewriting and re-presenting of Canadian political and social history by Indigenous peoples. This seminar addresses these residual and recent developments by:

- a) examining the ongoing impact of previous art practices and artists on contemporary production as both an opportunity and a burden,
- b) focusing on specific work in several media by artists who are currently engaged with the past in explicit and diverse ways,
- c) assessing the role and potential of artists as historians within larger political, social and cultural contexts.

Some of the concepts and issues to be examined include historical consciousness, truthfulness, deciding what to pass on, and what may account for the pervasive interest of late in storytelling in the visual arts and attendant fields. Some of the artists under consideration include Robert Hogue, Susan Hiller, Kara Walker, Chris Ofili, Shannon Bool and Louise Lawler

Special Topic: ALGORITHMIC CULTURE
COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020, ASEM courses will be taught remotely. Access to campus will be determined by, and subject to, government regulations.

The seminar explores the emergence of ‘algorithmic culture’ and considers the work of art in the post-Internet age. Discussion will address the cultural implications of proliferating algorithms in online communications, as well as how they bear on social formation, identification and exchange. How is culture imagined and produced in a world informed by data collection, analysis and processing? How does the sorting and classifying work of culture change when conducted by computational means - by social media recommendation services, marketing platforms and the like - rather than by human beings? Have our ways of seeing, understanding and representing transformed alongside the rise of a computational regime? How has this computational turn impacted contemporary aesthetics and taste, politics and the public sphere? Does the work of art change in the algorithmic age? What various ways are our lives observed, imagined, shaped, governed and controlled by the algorithms operating as we search and shop, read and chat? To what extent and effect?

Special Topic: SCREEN CULTURES
Screens proliferate in contemporary life. Beyond the cinema, we find screens in the streets, in our homes, cars, offices, hospitals, shopping malls and museums, on our dashboards and computers, televisions, tablets, cellphones and watches. Surface, interface, portal, test, protector and interceptor: screens mediate between the self and the world to turn individual beings into social subjects. In this seminar we will conduct theoretical and historical readings and study film, video, inter-, new and media installation works that consider the changing of screen rituals over time and the various ways in which different screen experiences shape individual and collective consciousness. We will explore the different discourses framing the history of moving image arts in the museum, the various modalities of screen practices and their effects, the ways in which screen life permeates the built environment and the affects of screen practice on temporal experience.

The course begins with a series of seminars led by the instructor meant to establish a theoretical, historical and conceptual ground for subsequent, student-led sessions presenting research projects that bridge student interests with the issues addressed in the course.

Special Topic:
This seminar is structured around a double question: where are sounds? where do they go? Addressed both theoretically and practically, the question allows for the treatment of two main lines that are crucial to understanding and analyzing any sound phenomenon: space and time.

This seminar is intended for students interested in going deeper into the notion of listening. Hearing, listening, being tuned into are three expressions that refer to different attitudes towards the sonic. Each and every one of us listens differently at each moment of our life. Each space, each experience has its specificity in terms of acoustics. These differences will be raised and discussed in class, since the course will be developed through texts, listening sessions of sound pieces, and exhibition(s) visits or meeting(s) with an artist.

The emphasis will be on the reading of texts known for having developed their thoughts in writing or on workshops related to the notion of listening. To these will be added a few texts by the by theorists (philosophers, acousticians), authors describing particular sound phenomena and curators who have addressed the subject in an exhibition. Discussions will alternate with listening sessions so as to create a balance between reading, listening and discussing.

The whole seminar rests upon conversation and counts on exchange, transmitting and circulating ideas, mutual receptivity and thus on listening in a manner both pragmatic and absolute.

Special Topic: INDIGENOUS CINEMA/AMERICAS

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020, ASEM courses will be taught remotely. Access to campus will be determined by, and subject to, government regulations.

This seminar will explore contemporary Indigenous cinema from Canada, the United States, Central and South America.

Indigenous Cinema of the Americas looks at the growing film production within the frame of Indigenous history and present-day reality. A selection of topics, readings and films of all kinds (fiction, documentary, animation…), will guide discussions on aesthetics and politics. Indigenous cinema will be considered not only as another independent and minority film movement, but also as one channel through which is expressed a different vision of the world, parallel to mainstream culture. It reflects the ongoing narrative of a distinct experience at the heart of the continent, rooted on the land that is subjected to the colonial process. The European settler view of hierarchy amongst peoples and cultures, with Western culture as a universal end, obliterated the cultural complexity of the first inhabitants, defined by another conception of social structure, family, law, time, relationship to nature, etc. How has that worldview endured, evolved or been eroded? What can the rest of society learn from Indigenous stories (for instance, about environmental issues)? That implies and acknowledges that these voices still bump against a colonial mindset, even in cultural discourses that seem to welcome them; this will be examined more closely in the context of Canada and Québec.

Another key question is whether we can define an identity proper to Indigenous cinema, beyond the content but also in formal aspects, narrative patterns and tones; in the play between emulation and differentiation in regards to film aesthetics in both mainstream trends and contemporary "auteur" world cinema. That question can be raised about any culturally specific or "national" cinema that emerged through film history. But here we must also be guarded against a common homogenizing view of Indigenous peoples. As there is a vast plurality of Native cultures across the Americas, so the notion of identity in cinema is also relative to the one of diversity.

Topic: CERAMICS I

An introductory studio/seminar course supporting the investigation of ceramics as a formal and cultural medium. Ideas, issues, concepts and techniques pertinent to the ceramic discipline are presented and explored through individual work and collective projects. Students have the opportunity to experiment with various clay bodies, forming processes, surface treatments (including digitally manipulated imagery for decals) and firing techniques. The relationship of ceramics to other contemporary art making practices is also considered.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to a home workspace for hands-on making. Demonstrations of ceramic processes will be presented with participation as permitted. Resourceful off-campus approaches to Ceramics will be developed and an international virtual visiting artist series will address multiple perspectives on contemporary ceramics and what it means to make in these challenging times.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant's artistic practice

The 'Additional Comments' section contains specific course topic information and related teaching requirements.

Additional Comments
Topic: CERAMICS I
An introductory studio/seminar course supporting the investigation of ceramics as a formal and cultural medium. Ideas, issues, concepts and techniques pertinent to the ceramic discipline are presented and explored through individual work and collective projects. Students have the opportunity to experiment with various clay bodies, forming processes, surface treatments (including digitally manipulated imagery for decals) and firing techniques. The relationship of ceramics to other contemporary art making practices is also considered.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to a home workspace for hands-on making. Demonstrations of ceramic processes will be presented with participation as permitted. Resourceful off-campus approaches to Ceramics will be developed and an international virtual visiting artist series will address multiple perspectives on contemporary ceramics and what it means to make in these challenging times.

Additional Information
Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant's artistic practice

The 'Additional Comments' section contains specific course topic information and related teaching requirements.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant’s artistic practice

The ‘Additional Comments’ section contains specific course topic information and related teaching requirements.

Additional Comments

Topic: DRAWING II
COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to resourceful, off-campus approaches to Painting and Drawing. Students will be encouraged to maintain working space adapted to their creative needs and practices.

This studio course is an intermediate drawing course in which directed projects allow students to explore different approaches to drawing and to begin to develop a more personal visual language based on the skill sets acquired at the 200 level. Historical and contemporary issues in art practice are addressed in this course.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Course content will be adapted to resourceful, off-campus approaches to Painting and Drawing. Students will be encouraged to maintain working space adapted to their creative needs and practices.

This studio course encourages drawing based on personal experience or fictitious content, and the influence of film, books, diaries and illustration. A focus on character, setting and alternate worlds all contribute to a re-emerging interest in narrative forms such as temporality, playback, loops and sequencing.

Special Topic: BLURS: DRAWINGS THAT MOVE

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to resourceful, off-campus approaches to Painting and Drawing. Students will be encouraged to maintain working space adapted to their creative needs and practices.

This course will examine from a studio artist’s perspective drawings and drawing production which prioritize acts and uses of motion within the field of visual art. Whether through kinetic mechanical action, elaborate autonomous mark-making machines, physical drawing installation, stop action, animated drawing, or simple repetition/erasure techniques, this course will examine the many methods by which visual artists employ movement within their drawings. Students will be expected to work on several thematic and method-based projects under the direction of a Studio Arts instructor.

Job Specific Requirements
Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant's artistic practice

The 'Additional Comments' section contains specific course topic information and related teaching requirements.

Topic: FIBRE STRUCTURES I
COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to encourage resourceful, off-campus approaches to fibres structures, while accomplishing all expected learning outcomes. In this special format, students will acquire essential hands-on knowledge in fibres while also gaining real-life skills that can be directly applied to their future careers in the arts (for example, best practices for working safely in a home-studio; building your own tools; sustainable methods for sourcing fibres-related materials; documenting and sharing work using digital platforms; exposure to a variety of professional practices through a series of behind-the-scenes presentations by invited artists).

Additional Information
Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Special Topic: PERFORMATIVE TEXTILES

This studio course will explore the specifics of the performative as it emerges within performance practices that incorporate the use of textiles. The notion of the performative (that which activates the work at the intersection of time, space, the body and the audience) will inform an investigation that delves into the role of textile as a form of transactional object, liminal dialogue and transformative materiality. This research will be grounded in workshop-based exercises and assigned performance projects while being supported by group discussions and critical readings from performance art historical contexts. Experimenting with a multiplicity of performative situations, contexts and attitudes, students will develop strategies for making deeply nuanced textile works that critically engage in contemporary notions of material practices.

Topic: INTRODUCTION TO VIDEO PRODUCTION

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to resourceful, off-campus approaches to art making.

A studio/seminar course introducing video technology as a tool for aesthetic investigations. Students work individually and collaboratively to develop a proficiency in the medium and evolve their own thematic and formal concerns. The course introduces basic pre-production, production, and post-production skills centred on the use of Mini-DV cameras and desktop technology to present basic concepts of non-linear editing. Issues specific to video are discussed through the analysis and demonstration of video art.

Job Specific Requirements
Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant's artistic practice

The 'Additional Comments' section contains specific course topic information and related teaching requirements.

Additional Comments
Topic: INTRODUCTION TO VIDEO PRODUCTION
A studio/seminar course introducing video technology as a tool for aesthetic investigations. Students work individually and collaboratively to develop a proficiency in the medium and evolve their own thematic and formal concerns. The course introduces basic pre-production, production, and post-production skills centred on the use of Mini-DV cameras and desktop technology to present basic concepts of non-linear editing. Issues specific to video are discussed through the analysis and demonstration of video art.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

In this course, students investigate and examine the numerous aspects of photography’s complex history, aesthetics, and processes, as well as different camera and darkroom techniques specific to colour photography. Students learn how to control the camera, expose film properly (transparency and negative), develop good printing skills in colour, and produce a coherent body of work. They should become aware of how colour contributes to the structure and meaning of photographs. Other topics include the history of colour photography and aesthetic and conceptual issues in the work of contemporary photographers. Students are expected to work on technical exercises and produce a final portfolio which is content-driven, demonstrates technical proficiency, and expresses the individual’s artistic interest and vision.

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant’s artistic practice

Special Topic: PORTRAITURE & SOCIAL IDENTITY

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Portraiture and Social Identity is a 3-credit studio course that offers students a chance to produce lens-based works that relate to the genre of portraiture and discourses on the representation of identity. This course orients portrait photography as a social practice, where the tension between limits of representation and contextual readings of images contributes to the production of meanings for the viewers and the artist. The course will offer students with existing perspectives in current and historical practices in photography and moving-image productions in the genre of portraiture.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Applicants must have an MFA (or equivalent) in addition to appropriate technical, digital and/or critical, theoretical expertise for the courses to which they are applying. Applicants should have distinguished themselves in their field by having a significant and active professional record (i.e. teaching, exhibitions, performances, screenings and/or publications). Previous teaching experience is desirable and a working knowledge of French is considered an asset.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant’s artistic practice

The ‘Additional Comments’ section contains specific course topic information and related teaching requirements.

Special Topic: IMAGE-MAKING FOR PRINT MEDIA

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

This studio course provides a technical and conceptual investigation of analog and digital practices characteristic of printmaking with an emphasis on lithography. Various approaches aligned with print including narrative, text/image and seriality will be discussed. Various methodologies will be covered including direct-drawing on mylar, frottage, stenciling, collage, transfers and pre-press image-preparation for lithography. Students will be expected to create individual bodies of work and to situate their work within contemporary practice.

Topic: SCREEN PRINTING II
An intermediate screen printing studio course with an emphasis on individual creative and theoretical development through experimentation and innovation. This course provides the opportunity for continued research in drawing, photographic and digital applications, colour printing, alternative printing surfaces, and the combination of print processes. Group and individual critiques and discussions emphasize problem solving and critical analysis in the creation of personal imagery. Students are required to develop a coherent portfolio that demonstrates their engagement in contemporary print theory and practice.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Note: This is a combined section: X-listed with PRIN 241-AA & PRIN 441-AA

PRIN 241/2, Stu AA:

An introductory studio course in the basic concepts of contemporary digital imaging and print applications. This course covers file creation and layers for multi-plate hand printing. The creation of multiples through traditional, non-traditional, and other historical technologies will also be explored. Lectures and critiques focus on theoretical, critical, and aesthetic issues in contemporary digital print media.

PRIN 341/2, Stu AA:

An intermediate studio course with an emphasis on concepts of digital imaging, print applications, file creation, and layers for multi-plate hand-printing and file export to various digital print formats. Lectures and critiques focus on theoretical, critical, and aesthetic issues in contemporary digital print media. Students are required to develop a coherent portfolio that demonstrates their involvement in contemporary print theory and practice.

PRIN 441/2, Stu AA:

An advanced digital studio course with an emphasis on individual creative and theoretical development through experimentation and innovation. In this course students develop an independent interdisciplinary research project that investigates the integration of digital and traditional reproduction technologies. Group and individual critiques and discussions emphasize problem solving and critical analysis in the creation of personal imagery. Students are required to develop a coherent portfolio that demonstrates their engagement in contemporary print theory and practice.

Part-time faculty members who have successfully taught a course three (3) times or more are deemed to be professionally and academically qualified to teach the same course or a closely related course. Applicants who have not met these requirements must submit the following:

i. An up-to-date curriculum vitae
ii. A statement that addresses how their professional practice qualifies them to teach this course
iii. A statement that addresses the teaching approach/strategy for this course
iv. Digital documentation of the applicant's artistic practice

Topic: PAINTING I

Please note that PTNG 200 section B has been reserved for students enrolled in the 120-credit program (ECP) with less experience in painting. PTNG 200 section B is designed to provide students with the foundations skills necessary to reach, by the end of the course, the same level of competency as students enrolled in the other sections of the course.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to resourceful, off-campus approaches to Painting and Drawing. Students will be encouraged to maintain working space adapted to their creative needs and practices.

A studio course which provides a technical and conceptual introduction to painting focusing on the distinctive nature of the medium. Basic painting materials and processes are explored through exercises in figuration, abstraction, colour, composition, and the construction of pictorial space.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images

- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Topic: PAINTING I

NOTE: The Fall Term only of PTNG 200 /3, CC is available for application and course assignment thereafter.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to resourceful, off-campus approaches to Painting and Drawing. Students will be encouraged to maintain working space adapted to their creative needs and practices.

A studio course which provides a technical and conceptual introduction to painting focusing on the distinctive nature of the medium. Basic painting materials and processes are explored through exercises in figuration, abstraction, colour, composition, and the construction of pictorial space.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to encourage resourceful, off-campus approaches to 3D art making. In keeping with the innovative and socially-responsive history of contemporary sculpture, students will learn how to adapt their own studio practices to the situation, and make the most of the resources at hand.

This is a studio course that introduces practices and concepts relating to the expansive field of contemporary sculpture and installation. The course places emphasis on material and conceptual exploration and experimentation through the development of artworks. Contexts and techniques of three-dimensional art making will be introduced and investigated through a variety of contemporary and traditional materials, including metal work, wood work and mould-making.

* Topic: SCULPTURE/MECHANICS
This studio course introduces students to animating sculpture through a variety of techniques such as moving joints, gear, chain, and pulley systems, and motion converters, leading to more complex assemblies in animating static form. Students develop basic skills in reading and drawing blueprints, as well as in measuring and marking techniques for application in metal, wood, mould-making, and other applicable materials.

Topic: SCULPTURE AND SPATIAL PRACTICES

NOTE: The Fall Term only of SCUL 310-B /3, 410-B /3, and 490-B /3 is available for application and course assignment thereafter.

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

Course content will be adapted to encourage resourceful, off-campus approaches to 3D art making. In keeping with the innovative and socially-responsive history of contemporary sculpture, students will learn how to adapt their own studio practices to the situation, and make the most of the resources at hand.

This course builds and expands on the potential for expression inherent in contemporary sculpture. Students are encouraged to develop an individual form of study through the various spatial considerations of sculptural intervention, installation, action, and object. Participants build on their awareness of contemporary issues and hone their identities as artists.

Note: This is a combined section: X-listed with SCUL 312-A

COVID-19: Due to the exceptional circumstances of COVID-19, in Fall 2020 this course will be taught remotely. Student access to campus will be subject to government regulations and in most cases will be extremely limited or not possible.

In order to accommodate for online and at-home learning due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this course will substitute pewter for bronze and aluminum. These alternative process methods will be examined through wax positive creation, gating system engineering, Zircar mould building, and pewter casting. Students will learn how to adapt their own studio practices to reflect the current flux of how and where to make.

SCUL 311-A

This course includes an introduction to the sculptural histories and contemporary contexts of bronze casting, and the technical processes of casting. Students also develop their conceptual skills in making contemporary sculpture with this traditional method. The course includes slide lectures, class discussions, a final critique and technical demonstrations.

SCUL 312-A

A continuation of Metal Casting: Bronze and Aluminum I. In this advanced course, students learn to cast larger or more complex artworks in bronze or aluminum. Depending on the student's project, this process may involve organic burn-out techniques, multiples or multi-part casting fabrication, or casting metal in sections to be welded together. NOTE: A course fee for materials is required for this course.

Additional Comments

Topic: METAL CASTING: BRONZE AND ALUMINUM I & II

Note: This is a combined section: X-listed with SCUL 312-A

SCUL 311-A

This course includes an introduction to the sculptural histories and contemporary contexts of bronze casting, and the technical processes of casting. Students also develop their conceptual skills in making contemporary sculpture with this traditional method. The course includes slide lectures, class discussions, a final critique and technical demonstrations.

SCUL 312-A

A continuation of Metal Casting: Bronze and Aluminum I. In this advanced course, students learn to cast larger or more complex artworks in bronze or aluminum. Depending on the student’s project, this process may involve organic burn-out techniques, multiples or multi-part casting fabrication, or casting metal in sections to be welded together. NOTE: A course fee for materials is required for this course.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images

A survey lecture course introducing the history and theory of art video practice since its inception in the 1960s. The course locates the roots of this art form in such divergent impulses as conceptualism, community activism, technological experimentation, and broadcast television, as well as in narrative and documentary traditions. In addition, regional Canadian video artists and co-operatives are situated within international historical trends and the development of post-modern and other theoretical perspectives. Weekly screenings.

Academic Unit Head

Sussman, Mark

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This is a studio acting course for non-theatre students which is cross-listed with two other courses, ACTT 202/2 (Introduction to Acting II) and ACTT 298/2 (Scene Study). The instructor, with the assistance of workshop leaders, will be responsible for supervising four student-run workshop groups with 16 participants each (scheduled for 4 hours per week). Three of these studios will be populated by students registered for ACTT 201/2. The fourth will be populated by students registered for ACTT 202/42 or ACTT 398/2. This course has its foundation in movement and text. Students refine skills in layering, verbing, actioning and imaging. The principal qualification for teaching this course is a demonstrated profound commitment to teaching performance to students from disciplines throughout the University. Experience teaching Laban style movement and acting is an asset. Experience providing studio acting to non-theatre students is a must. BFA and five years of professional teaching is required.

Applicants must have:
- an MFA in Acting and/or at least 7 years' experience at the professional acting for theatre.
- an active professional practice including recognition as an actor by her/his professional peers.
- an active professional practice including recognition as an actor by her/his professional peers.
- current practice with theatre focused on cultural diversity will be considered as a strong asset
- a record of successful teaching at the university level.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications for each of the classes they are applying for.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

Note: This posting is for the course ACTT 201/4 - 01, which has a capacity of 48. ACTT 201/4 - 02 is cross-listed with ACTT 202/4 - 02 and ACTT 298/4 - 01, which have a combined capacity of 16. The total capacity for this posting is therefore 64 students.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Demonstrated capacity to teach a course which includes: fundamentals of text analysis for the actor; the fundamentals of text analysis for the actor; action and reaction with a partner; embodiment of given circumstances; and, the physical and vocal manifestation of characters. The course should involve each student rehearsing and performing two scenes from different plays, one contemporary realism and one from the early modern period (e.g. dramatic texts by writers such as Ibsen, Shaw, Coward, Wilde etc.). These scenes should be informed by the work of Stanislavski as well as the four major recognized acting techniques that emerged from Stanislavski’s system: those of Strasberg, Hagen, Meisner and Adler; students should acquire a basic understanding of the major features of – and differences between – these techniques. A very strong emphasis of this course should be text analysis for the actor (close reading which reveals character traits, given circumstances, objective, obstacles, stakes etc.) and how to play actions based on insights gained by the analysis.

Applicants must have:
- an MFA in Acting and/or at least 7 years’ experience at the professional level performing as an actor in theatre (2 or more professional projects within the last 5 years).
- an active professional practice including recognition as an actor by her/his professional peers.
- a record of successful teaching at the university level.
- recognized artistic practice at a regional and/or national level with a variety of companies and in a variety of acting styles will be considered a strong asset.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications indicating the pedagogical approach proposed to the course in light of the subject matter outlined above.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

This is a multi-section coordinated course. The syllabus should be designed in consultation with the ACTT Area Coordinator to ensure that all sections are harmonized.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

This course will be team-taught by two instructors, each of whom will be assigned 50% of the course. One instructor will be responsible for instruction in movement, the other instructor will be responsible for instruction in voice.

The movement instructor will have a demonstrated capacity to lead a course which includes development of strength, flexibility, and specificity in the body’s ability to communicate non-verbally; clarity of physical presence; movement improvisation; composition of solo, partner-based, and group performance work. Demonstrated ability to introduce students to the work of one or more recognized disciplines of movement for the theatre, such as the approach of Etienne Decroux, Jacques Lecoq, Eugenio Barba, Biomechanics, mask work, or acrobatics.

Applicants for the movement position must have:
- an MFA in Movement for the theatre and/or at least 7 years’ experience at the professional level in a recognized discipline of movement for the theatre such as the approach of Etienne Decroux, Jacques Lecoq, Eugenio Barba, Biomechanics, mask work, or acrobatics.
- an active professional practice including recognition as a movement expert by her/his professional peers.
- a record of successful teaching at the university level.

The voice instructor will have a demonstrated capacity to lead a course which is an experiential introduction to the core concepts of voice work for the actor such as unrestrained, spontaneous breathing; whole-body resonance; expressive use of pitch/intonation, rhythm and timbre; and boldness and variety in speaking text. The course should include the performance of personal stories and contemporary poetry.

Applicants for the voice position must have:
- an MFA in Voice Pedagogy and/or Certification in a recognized discipline of whole-body vocal training for the actor such as Fitzmaurice Voicework, Linklater Voice, Patsy Rodenburg Voice.
- an active professional practice including recognition as a voice expert by her/his professional peers and at least 7 years of experience, in coaching/teaching Voice, Speech, and Text to professional actors and theatre students.
- a record of successful teaching at the university level.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:

- a cover letter describing their qualifications indicating the pedagogical approach proposed to the course in light of the subject matter outlined above.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

The format of this course requires collaborative training in movement and voice, and supervision of a shared outcome performance. This section must be designed and taught in coordination with the other instructor, and with the ACTT Area Coordinator.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

The candidate must have a demonstrated capacity to lead a course which includes intermediate work in text analysis for the actor; action and reaction with a partner; embodiment of given circumstances; and, the physical and vocal manifestation of characters. The course should involve each student rehearsing and performing two scenes from different plays or screenplays, including at least one from a non-realistic genre of text, such as existentialism, absurdism or expressionism. These scenes should be informed by the work of Stanislavsky as well as two or more additional distinct, recognized acting philosophies, such as those of Chekhov, Grotowski and/or Donnellan. This course should include foundational understanding and skill in the key differences between stage acting vs. on-camera acting.

Applicants must have:
- an MFA in Acting and/or at least 7 years’ experience at the professional level performing as an actor in theatre (2 or more professional projects within the last 5 years).
- an active professional practice including recognition as an actor by her/his professional peers.
- a record of successful teaching at the university level.
- recognized artistic practice at a regional and/or national level with a variety of companies and in a variety of acting styles will be considered a strong asset.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications indicating the pedagogical approach proposed to the course in light of the subject matter outlined above.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Additional Comments

This is a multi-section coordinated course. The syllabus should be designed in consultation with the ACTT Area Coordinator to ensure that all sections are harmonized.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages
Interested individuals (including Concordia University Part-Time Faculty Association (CUPFA) members) must apply by logging into the Faculty Resource Information System (FRIS) at: https://fris.concordia.ca. Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Demonstrated capacity to teach a course which includes: the creation of a performance using a text or a collage of scenes that will be presented at the end of the semester in front of an audience or in any other appropriate form within the context of the covid-19. The course should involve work on an assigned text (dramatic or not); elaboration of scenes from that text; and performance of that text in a specific stage form or media. The tasks of the instructor include: assessment of the students in order to select a play (or a series of scenes); capacity to assign roles/parts to the students based on the play (or scenes) that was selected for them. The instructor will need to: help the performers on the interpretation of their roles; elaborate a collage of the scenes (if needed) in order to create a performance; stage the collage of scenes (or the play); guide the assistant director(s) and stage designer(s) in their work on the project; provide the assistant director(s) and stage designer(s) with information regarding production and design; plan and coordinate with assistant director(s) the work during the lab times; help and assist all students (actors, assistant director(s), designer(s)) as they enter in the theatre or work with a media and prepare for their public performances or final project; assist and watch the public performances in order to grade all students (actors, assistant director(s), designer(s)) on their work in this class.

Applicants must have:
- an MFA in Acting and/or at least 7 years’ experience as an actor at the professional level (2 or more professional projects within the last 5 years).
- substantial experience directing actors in professional theatre projects (2 or more professional projects within the last 5 years).
- a record of successful teaching at the university level.

The performing for young audience instructor will have a demonstrated experience and capacity to lead a course which includes the development of skills in performing for various types of audiences including children and teenagers; improvisation; composition of solo and group performance work.

The storytelling and performance creation instructor will have a demonstrated experience and capacity to lead a course which is an experiential introduction to storytelling; acting; expressive use of body in performance and boldness and variety in speaking text. The course should include the use of personal stories and contemporary poetry.

Demonstrated capacity for both instructors to teach a course which includes: the creation of a performance using a text for young audience or a collage of scenes that will be presented at the end of the semester in front of an audience or in any other appropriate form within the context of the covid-19. The course should involve work on an assigned text for young audience (dramatic or not); elaboration of scenes from that text; and performance of that text in a specific stage form or media. The tasks of the instructor include: assessment of the students in order to select a play (or a series of scenes); capacity to assign roles/parts to the students based on the play (or scenes) that was selected for them. The instructor will need to: help the performers on the interpretation of their roles for young audiences; elaborate a collage of the scenes (if needed) in order to create a performance; stage the collage of scenes (or the play); guide the assistant director(s) and stage designer(s) in their work on the project; provide the assistant director(s) and stage designer(s) with information regarding production and design; plan and coordinate with assistant director(s) the work during the lab times; help and assist all students (actors, assistant director(s), designer(s)) as they enter in the theatre or work with a media and prepare for their public performances or final project; assist and watch the public performances in order to grade all students (actors, assistant director(s), designer(s)) on their work in this class.

Applicants must have:
- an MFA in Acting and/or a PhD in Theatre and/or at least 7 years’ experience as an actor/director at the professional level
- substantial experience directing actors in theatre projects for young audiences (2 or more professional projects within the last 5 years).
- a record of successful teaching at the university level

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:
- a cover letter describing their qualifications indicating the pedagogical approach proposed to the course in light of the subject matter outlined above.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Provide an overview of theories and methods for teaching devised theatre and leading a devised theatre ensemble. This is a performance pedagogy course for advanced theatre undergraduate students who have some experience collectively or creating devising a performance already. Examine the Tectonic Theatre Projects’ proprietary method of devising theatre, Moment Work. The focus of the course is to prepare those students to teach methods for devising theatre at a community level or to assist the teaching of devised theatre at the university level. Students also continue to learn how to lead an ensemble in devising a performance and receive an introduction to ethical approaches to working with performer/creators from all disciplines.

This course is taught in conjunction with PERC 212/2 Introduction to Dramaturgy.

Applicants must have:

- MFA in an area of theatre that focuses on devised performance and/or post-graduate professional training in devised theatre.
- Experience teaching devised theatre in the processes used by the Tectonic Theatre Project is an asset.
- An active professional practice including recognition as a performance creator by her/his professional peers. This is a cross-disciplinary area in theatre so the professional work might be in new play development or in using improvisation to develop text.
- Current practice with theatre focused on cultural diversity, feminist or other activist performance will be considered as a strong asset.

New applicants or current members who have not previously taught this course more than three times should include:

- a cover letter describing their qualifications indicating the pedagogical approach proposed to the course in light of the subject matter outlined above.
- a copy of their C.V., and
- two letters of recommendation.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Minimum requirement: MA (or equivalent) in the field.

Applicants who have not taught the present course successfully three (3) times or more must submit a covering letter clearly explaining their qualifications to teach the course, evaluations from past relevant teaching experience, and CV. Please submit your CV, supporting documents (if needed), and application electronically through FRIS (paper applications are no longer accepted).

*If this is a course evaluated through CEAB, the instructor must be willing to provide grades for the graduate attributes that are assessed in the course in a timely, prescribed manner.

Additional Comments

Applicants are reminded that they should maintain a professional service dossier and that they must keep it up to date, as per Article 10.11 of the CUPFA Collective Agreement, in each of the departments that they apply to. Once you create your professional service dossier online in FRIS, it will be the one used by all Departments you apply to.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

In that case the applicant must submit a covering letter clearly explaining their qualifications to teach the course, evaluations from past relevant teaching experience, and CV. Please submit your covering letter addressed to Dr. Pugh, Chair of the Department of Mechanical, Industrial and Aerospace Engineering, CV, supporting documents (if needed), and application electronically through FRIS (paper applications are no longer accepted).

MASc or MEng in the field; Post-secondary teaching experience in the course subject and level preferred.

The instructor must be either a registered professional engineer in Canada, or in the process of acquiring registration and within five years of his/her first teaching contract. For those acquiring registration, permission to teach the course must be given by the Dean.

Note that instructors in MIAE courses must adhere to the guidelines set by the course coordinators.

Note that midterm exams may be held outside of class hours, including on weekends.

If this course evaluates graduate attributes, the instructor is expected to provide grades for the graduate attributes that are assessed in the course in a timely, prescribed manner. The instructor is expected to complete and submit a graduate attributes assessment form for the course.

Additional Comments

*The course has a fixed syllabus (available on request).
*The course uses a specified textbook.
*The course is a multisection course with a course coordinator and a common final exam for all sections.

Applicants are reminded that they should maintain a professional service dossier and that they must keep it up to date, as per Article 10.11 of the CUPFA Collective Agreement, in each of the departments that they apply to. Once you create your professional service dossier online in FRIS, it will be the one used by all Departments you apply to.

Job Specific Requirements

* Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

In that case the applicant must submit a covering letter clearly explaining their qualifications to teach the course, evaluations from past relevant teaching experience, and CV. Please submit your covering letter addressed to Dr. Pugh, Chair of the Department of Mechanical, Industrial and Aerospace Engineering, CV, supporting documents (if needed), and application electronically through FRIS (paper applications are no longer accepted).

- MASc or MEng in the field; Post-secondary teaching experience in the course subject and level preferred.
- The instructor must be a registered professional engineer in Canada and must provide proof of licensure.
- Note that instructors in MIAE courses must adhere to the guidelines set by the course coordinators.
- Note that midterm exams may be held outside of class hours, including on weekends.
- If this course evaluates graduate attributes, the instructor is expected to provide grades for the graduate attributes that are assessed in the course in a timely, prescribed manner. The instructor is expected to complete and submit a graduate attributes assessment form for the course.

Additional Comments

- *The course has a fixed syllabus (available on request).
- *The course uses a specified textbook.

Applicants are reminded that they should maintain a professional service dossier and that they must keep it up to date, as per Article 10.11 of the CUPFA Collective Agreement, in each of the departments that they apply to. Once you create your professional service dossier online in FRIS, it will be the one used by all Departments you apply to.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Applicants are considered to agree to meet the above conditions.
Interested individuals (including Concordia University Part-Time Faculty Association (CUPFA) members) must apply by logging into the Faculty Resource Information System (FRIS) at: https://fris.concordia.ca. The online dossier and online application must be submitted no later than 11:59 p.m. on June 15, 2020.

As specified in Article 10.01 a) of the Concordia University Part-Time Faculty Association (CUPFA) collective agreement: only Canadian citizens and permanent residents may apply to posted courses. Non-Canadians shall only be eligible to receive Reserve Courses as per Article 10.24 of the CUPFA collective agreement, and therefore shall be classified as Adjuncts or Graduate Students.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

In that case the applicant must submit a covering letter clearly explaining their qualifications to teach the course, evaluations from past relevant teaching experience, and CV. Please submit your covering letter addressed to Dr. Pugh, Chair of the Department of Mechanical, Industrial and Aerospace Engineering, CV, supporting documents (if needed), and application electronically through FRIS (paper applications are no longer accepted).

MASc or MEng in the field; Post-secondary teaching experience in the course subject and level preferred.

The instructor must be a registered professional engineer in Canada and must provide proof of licensure.

This course also includes programming of an Arduino device.

Note that instructors in MIAE courses must adhere to the guidelines set by the course coordinators.

If this course evaluates graduate attributes, the instructor is expected to provide grades for the graduate attributes that are assessed in the course in a timely, prescribed manner. The instructor is expected to complete and submit a graduate attributes assessment form for the course.

Additional Comments

*The course has a fixed syllabus (available on request).
*The course uses a specified textbook.
*The course is a multisection course with a course coordinator and a common final exam for all sections.

Applicants are reminded that they should maintain a professional service dossier and that they must keep it up to date, as per Article 10.11 of the CUPFA Collective Agreement, in each of the departments that they apply to. Once you create your professional service dossier online in FRIS, it will be the one used by all Departments you apply to.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)

Academic and professional qualifications: Undergraduate Accountancy degree and a Canadian Chartered Professional Accountant designation. A Master’s degree is considered to be an asset. Experience teaching accounting at the post-secondary level required.

Given the specificity of this course, recent specialist work experience is also required.

Please enclose an updated CV including evidence of appropriate qualifications and experience.

Additional Comments

Note that this is a coordinated course and the instructor must adhere to the departmental coordination policy. For a copy of the coordination policy, please apply to the department chair. This course typically has a mid-term exam on the weekend. As soon as the date has been confirmed, the professor will be informed of the exact date, time and location of the exam.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Academic and professional qualifications: Undergraduate Accountancy degree and a Canadian Chartered Professional Accountant designation. A Master’s degree is considered to be an asset. Experience teaching accounting at the post-secondary level required.

Given the specificity of this course, recent specialist work experience is also required.

Please enclose an updated CV including evidence of appropriate qualifications and experience.

Additional Comments
Note that this is a coordinated course and the instructor must adhere to the departmental coordination policy. For a copy of the coordination policy, please apply to the department chair. This course typically has a mid-term exam on the weekend. As soon as the date has been confirmed, the professor will be informed of the exact date, time and location of the exam.

Additional Information
Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

* Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Master's degree and relevant teaching and work experience are required

*This is a coordinated course with a common course outline, common textbook and it may have a common final exam. In case there is a common final exam, it will be prepared by the course coordinator. Also note that while the midterm exam will not be coordinated, all sections may be asked to offer their respective midterm(s) on the same date.

*The instructors are required to send the course outline to the Course Coordinator two calendar weeks prior to the start of classes and the Department Assistant once the final outline is approved.

*If you have not taught the course that you are applying for at least three times successfully, please note that you must demonstrate that you belong to one of the classifications specified by AACSB as explained in the document "John Molson School of Business Faculty Qualifications – Standard 15 - AACSB Definition of Criteria" found at the following link: http://www.concordia.ca/content/dam/jmsb/docs/jobs/aacsb-standard-15-faculty-qualifications.pdf

IMPORTANT INFORMATION/REQUIREMENTS

Course Description: This course provides a general perspective on the history, operation, and relationships between Canadian and international product, labour and financial markets. Specifically, students are introduced to issues of fundamental importance to today's managers and entrepreneurs such as changes in structure and competitiveness in these markets in response to government policies, the determination, and behaviour of interest rates, inflation, market integration, and the role and function of financial intermediation. It further provides students with the knowledge of the role and impact of regulation and other government interventions in these markets.

Course Content & Evaluation Scheme

Required Textbook: Etext MyEconLab New Design with eText for Analysis of Markets for Concordia University Ed 4

Required Chapters/Topics to be covered:

Chapters 1 through 11

Required Course Evaluation:

Two In-Class Tests @10% each 20%
Midterm Exam 30%
Final Exam 50%

Instructors are expected to make every effort to follow the required content and evaluation scheme. The Department reserves the right to make minor modifications to the course outline in the interest of delivering comparable student experiences across multiple sections of a course throughout the year.

Additional Comments

Due to extraordinary circumstances, assessment schemes may be modified by the course coordinator and/or the Department.

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Master's degree and relevant teaching and work experience are required.
- This is a coordinated course with a common course outline, common textbook and it may have a common final exam. In case there is a common final exam, it will be prepared by the course coordinator. Also note that while the midterm exam will not be coordinated, all sections may be asked to offer their respective midterm(s) on the same date.
- The instructors are required to send the course outline to the Course Coordinator two calendar weeks prior to the start of classes and the Department Assistant once the final outline is approved.

*If you have not taught the course that you are applying for at least three times successfully, please note that you must demonstrate that you belong to one of the classifications specified by AACSB as explained in the document “John Molson School of Business Faculty Qualifications – Standard 15 - AACSB Definition of Criteria” found at the following link: http://www.concordia.ca/content/dam/jmsb/docs/jobs/aacsb-standard-15-faculty-qualifications.pdf

IMPORTANT INFORMATION/REQUIREMENTS

Course Description: This course provides a general understanding of the fundamental concepts of finance theory as they apply to the firm's long-run and short-run financing, and investment decisions. Building on the objective of firm value maximization, students become familiar with the conceptual issues underlying risk and return relationships and their measurements, as well as the valuation of financial securities. They also learn the concept of cost of capital, its measurement, and the techniques of capital budgeting as practised by today's managers. Students are introduced to the basic issues surrounding the firm's short-term and long-term funding decisions and its ability to pay dividends.

Course Content & Evaluation Scheme

Required Chapters/Topics to be covered:
- Time Value of money, Bond valuation, Stock valuations - DDM, Risk & Return and Modern Portfolio Theory, CAPM, Capital Budgeting, Introduction to Options

Required Course Evaluation:
- Class Test 1 - 20%
- Class Test 2 - 20%
- Final - 60%

Instructors are expected to make every effort to follow the required content and evaluation scheme. The Department reserves the right to make minor modifications to the course outline in the interest of delivering comparable student experiences across multiple sections of a course throughout the year.

Additional Comments

Due to extraordinary circumstances, assessment schemes may be modified by the course coordinator and/or the Department.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)

- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

IMPORTANT INFORMATION/REQUIREMENTS

Course Description: This course is concerned with the key aspects of short-term financial management. It begins with brief coverage of the institutional environment facing the financial manager in Canada. Detailed coverage of sources for short-term borrowing and investments is presented. The structure of the Canadian financial system along with a description of the various methods of effecting payments as well as the clearing and settlement system are covered. Topics in overall liquidity management are briefly reviewed from a theoretical perspective. Traditional subjects in cash management such as collections, disbursement and control, forecasting, company bank relationship, short-term investment, and borrowing are examined next. Such new developments as electronic data interchange and EFT/POS are also examined. The course also provides coverage of trade credit both from a theoretical positive standpoint and a normative viewpoint.

Course Description: This course provides students with an integrating framework to understand the risks, challenges, and opportunities that banks face in their global operations. The course covers both commercial and investment banking activities in mature as well as emerging markets. The course begins with an examination of opportunities that foreign markets offer as well as difficulties that banks face when dealing with unfamiliar economic and political environments abroad. This is followed by a discussion of banking operations in international and foreign markets. Topics for this discussion may include microfinance, international loans, project financing and an assessment of political or sovereign risks. The impact of foreign operations on mitigation or enhancement of various risks associated with home country operations is examined. The course also examines the importance of global regulation as well as governance and ethical issues associated with international banking.

If you have not taught this course three times or more, please attach an updated CV and evidence of appropriate qualifications and experience, such as a letter addressing your proposed approach to the course, course evaluations from this and other departments or institutions, and any other materials you feel are relevant.

Note that instructors in COMM courses and in multi-section undergraduate and graduate courses must adhere to the guidelines set by the course coordinators. Instructors in all courses must also collaborate with all assessment of learning data collection efforts.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Job Specific Requirements

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Graduate degree (MSc, MBA or PhD) in MIS or related area; Industry/business experience and competency in object-oriented development; knowledge of Unified Modeling Language, Expertise and experience in transforming IS requirements from the system analysis phase into system design specifications, and to transform the IS design specifications from the system design phase into a system prototype. Due to AACSB accreditation requirements, applicant’s professional qualification (certification) would be an additional advantage.

Additional Comments

If you have not taught the course that you are applying for at least three times successfully, please note that you must demonstrate that you belong to one of the classification specified by AACSB as explained in the document “John Molson School of Business Faculty Qualifications – Standard 15 - AACSB Definition of Criteria” found at the following link: http://www.concordia.ca/content/dam/jmsb/docs/jobs/aacsb-standard-15-faculty-qualifications.pdf

Also, course evaluations from other departments or institutions, CV, letter outlining the approach to teaching, would be helpful to the PTHC in assessing the candidacy of applicants who have not taught BTM 496, successfully three times or more.

Job Specific Requirements
Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Graduate degree (MSC or PhD) in Applied Statistics or related area. Expertise and experience in development and delivery of courses in statistics; competency in statistical software and data management and analysis.

Additional Comments
If you have not taught the course that you are applying for at least three times successfully, please note that you must demonstrate that you belong to one of the classification specified by AACSB as explained in the document "John Molson School of Business Faculty Qualifications – Standard 15 - AACSB Definition of Criteria" found at the following link: http://www.concordia.ca/content/dam/jmsb/docs/jobs/aacsb-standard-15-faculty-qualifications.pdf
Also, course evaluations from other departments or institutions, CV, letter outlining the approach to teaching, would be helpful to the PTHC in assessing the candidacy of applicants who have not taught COMM 215, successfully three times or more.

Additional Information
Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Additional Comments

If you have not taught the course that you are applying for at least three times successfully, please note that you must demonstrate that you belong to one of the classification specified by AACSB as explained in the document "John Molson School of Business Faculty Qualifications – Standard 15 - AACSB Definition of Criteria" found at the following link: http://www.concordia.ca/content/dam/jmsb/docs/jobs/aacsb-standard-15-faculty-qualifications.pdf

Also, course evaluations from other departments or institutions, CV, letter outlining the approach to teaching, would be helpful to the PTHC in assessing the candidacy of applicants who have not taught COMM 225, successfully three times or more.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages

Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

- Minimum of a Master’s Degree in Psychology, Applied Human Science, Counselling, Education or a cognate discipline.
- Minimum 2 years’ recent experience (within the past five years) in a government-funded counselling, career, or academic support centre (for example, a CEGEP or university Learning Centre). This experience should involve meeting individually with adolescent or adult students in a supportive, non-grading setting in order to tutor, counsel or coach them in enhancing their personal wellbeing and success. The candidate should be trained to deal with a wide variety of personal, career and educational issues that can interfere with academic success, motivation and quality of life.
- Experience teaching courses at the high school or post-secondary level.

Additional Comments

UNSS 200 is a multi-sectioned, coordinated course. Instructors will be expected to follow a prescribed curriculum, adhere to a course outline common to all sections, undergo orientation to the course philosophy, methodology and pedagogical approach before starting to teach, attend curriculum meetings as required and hold regular office hours.

The instructor’s role will be to counsel and guide students through an individual process of self-discovery, mindfulness and self-reflection, provide opportunities for students to enhance their self-management skills, and encourage them to explore career directions.

NB All classes in the UNSS program are capped at 25 students.

Job Specific Requirements

* Applicants who have not taught this course three times or more are required to demonstrate to the Part-Time Hiring Committee how their training and experience meet the qualifications as stated below.

Minimum of a Master’s Degree in Psychology, Applied Human Science, Counselling, Education or a cognate discipline.

Minimum 2 years’ recent experience (within the past five years) in a government-funded counselling, career, or academic support centre (for example, a CEGEP or university Learning Centre). This experience should involve meeting individually with adolescent or adult students in a supportive, non-grading setting in order to tutor, counsel or coach them in enhancing their personal wellbeing and success. The candidate should be trained to deal with a wide variety of personal, career and educational issues that can interfere with academic success, motivation and quality of life.

Experience teaching courses at the high school or post-secondary level.

Additional Comments

UNSS 200 is a multi-sectioned, coordinated course. Instructors will be expected to follow a prescribed curriculum, adhere to a course outline common to all sections, undergo orientation to the course philosophy, methodology and pedagogical approach before starting to teach, attend curriculum meetings as required and hold regular office hours.

The instructor’s role will be to counsel and guide students through an individual process of self-discovery, mindfulness and self-reflection, provide opportunities for students to enhance their self-management skills, and encourage them to explore career directions.

NB All classes in the UNSS program are capped at 25 students.

Additional Information

Given the possibility courses will not be offered in classrooms, in order to deliver the course content in an electronic format applicants are considered to agree to meet the following conditions:

- Access to internet and hardware equipment (computer, webcam, microphone and headset)
- Ability to launch your Moodle course and use some of the elementary features (e.g., but not limited to, add files, use the Moodle announcements feature to send important messages to the whole class, set up an assignment in Moodle to receive submissions and make grades/feedback available to students)
- If you do a synchronous lecture, it has to be recorded
- Upload recorded lectures to YuJa and make them available (securely) in Moodle – training will be made available before and during the summer terms
- Make transcripts available of all recorded videos – or, endeavor to provide material to students in an accessible fashion, including (but not limited to) providing transcripts of recorded lectures (via Yuja) and providing image descriptions for any posted images
- Ability to maintain regular live contact with students, including virtual office hours (via Zoom, Adobe Connect, or similar platform)
- Clearly communicate to students your preferred mode to receive questions and messages
