Fall 2018

ADMI 814 (MSCA 644): Seminar in Meso Organizational Behavior

This research oriented seminar focuses on understanding organizational phenomena by bridging between concepts or theories at the individual (i.e., micro) and the contextual (i.e., macro) levels of analysis. Students will learn about different theories and models that help us understand bridges between different levels of analysis, and examine strategies for carrying out research that can accommodate the impact of constructs at various levels. Emphasis will be on how to contextualize individual behavior and how to understand the emergence of collective phenomena. Major topic areas include socially shared cognition and affect, leaders' influence in social collectives, group diversity, and organizational learning.
