

Call for Applications: BMO PhD Scholarship 2022/23

The John Molson School of Business and the L. Jacques Ménard - BMO Centre for Capital Markets at Concordia University welcome applications for one (1) PhD scholarship valued at $20,000. The purpose of the scholarship is to facilitate research on capital markets and to provide support to a graduate student interested in empirical and/or theoretical capital markets research.

Details

The BMO PhD scholarship is funded by the Jacques Ménard - BMO Centre for Capital Markets at the John Molson School of Business. Full-time PhD students who have successfully completed their comprehensive exams may apply. The scholarship is open to Canadian citizens, permanent residents, and international students who are conducting or who will conduct targeted research in the area of finance, with a preference given to students focusing on capital markets research. The selection of the recipient will be based on academic excellence and the relevance of the research topic.

Value: $20,000 per year

Number of scholarships: One

Duration: One year

Application process

To apply, please submit your application electronically to jmsb.gradawards@concordia.ca with the following required documents in one combined PDF file by 5pm on October 31, 2022:

- An unofficial transcript of your current program of studies;
- A CV, including a list of all relevant research experience;
- A research proposal (max. 1,200 words) outlining your general research interests and your specific research plans (indicate a title – even if provisional) in the field of capital markets;
- One letter of recommendation from your supervisor or a faculty member who has taught you.

Note: Use the subject line “BMO Centre PhD scholarship application 2022-2023” when submitting your application and name your PDF file as follows: “[YOUR LASTNAME] - BMO Centre PhD scholarship application 2022”. Incomplete or late applications will not be considered.

The L. Jacques Ménard - BMO Centre for Capital Markets

The L. Jacques Ménard - BMO Centre for Capital Markets was founded in 2021 and is housed at Concordia University’s John Molson School of Business. The Centre endeavours to provide the next generation of capital market professionals with an education grounded in theory and practice, and advance scholarly research and practical approaches that respond to current challenges faced by the banking industry. The Centre is dedicated to knowledge creation and applied practice while providing an environment for students and faculty to cultivate ties with the capital markets community.