Introduction to the Library website & subject guide

<https://library.concordia.ca/>

The screenshot shows the Concordia University Library homepage. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for 'Concordia', 'Carrefour', 'Directories', 'Hours', 'A-Z', and 'Maps'. On the right, there are buttons for 'The Campaign for Concordia' and 'Quick links'. Below this is the Concordia University logo and the word 'Library'. A red box highlights a secondary navigation bar containing 'Library Research Skills Tutorial', 'Ask us now', and 'Log into ...'. A green circle highlights the 'FIND' menu item, which has opened a dropdown list of services including 'Sofia Discovery tool', 'Databases by subject', 'Course Reserves', 'E-journals via BrowZine', 'E-journals via Sofia', 'Article/Chapter Scan & Deliver', 'Intercampus Delivery of Bound Periodicals/Microforms', 'Interlibrary Loans', 'Spectrum Research Repository', 'Special Collections', and 'Additional resources & services'. To the right of this list is a search bar with a 'Search' button and a link to 'Advanced search'. A blue bar at the bottom features six service icons: 'Databases by Subject' (circled in pink), 'E-Journals', 'Course Reserves & Textbooks', 'Citation Guides & Zotero', 'Loans & Returns', and 'Book a Group Study Room' (circled in purple). Below this bar are three tabs for 'Undergraduate students', 'Graduate students', and 'Faculty'. A footer note says 'Find databases & more via the subject guide for your department'. On the right side, there is a section titled 'Today's opening hours'.

Databases

In the library context, a database is a searchable and structured collection of information. We subscribe to over 400 databases, each providing access to material in a broad subject area such as biology or English literature. In databases, you will find e-books, journal articles, data, images, video, audio, and many other formats that you can cite in your academic work.

NATURAL LAW AND UNIVERSAL HUMAN RIGHTS.

Abstract: Abdullahi An-Na'im has set his life's quest on attempting to find a way that Muslim society can be attuned to the moral commands of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, a Western creation. At present, the Shari'a and the Declaration are in obvious tension, if not conflict, in areas such as freedom of religion and the rights of women. An-Na'im finds that the Shari'a is a creation of man derived in history from an interpretation of Islamic sources. Muslims today can legitimately develop their own interpretation relying on the root sources of Islam, but only so long as those sources are distorted by the doctrine of Naskh. With a genuine interpretation of norms from the Qur'an, the principles of Islam, articulated through regional and historical experiences, can engage the values of the Declaration in synergetic enterprise. On the other hand, Professor An-Na'im notes that the Declaration is itself the product of Western history and experience. How then can we be confident that a relationship between variable Muslim experience and the Declaration be successful? The answer, this Essay suggests, lies in the norms of natural law accessible by reason by all peoples. Those norms provide for the "universality" of many parts of the Declaration, and they are in harmony with Islam, properly understood, as well as with Judaism and Christianity. [ABSTRACT FROM AUTHOR]

Abstract

Translate ~

Rapid advancements in human neuroscience and neurotechnology open unprecedented possibilities for accessing, collecting, sharing and manipulating information from the human brain. Such applications raise important challenges to human rights principles that need to be addressed to prevent unintended consequences. This paper assesses the implications of emerging neurotechnology applications in the context of the human-rights framework and suggests that existing human rights may not be sufficient to respond to these emerging issues. After analysing the relationship between neuroscience and human rights, we identify four new rights that may become of great relevance in the coming decades: the right to cognitive liberty, the right to mental privacy, the right to mental integrity, and the right to psychological continuity.

River Basin Development and Human Rights in Eastern Africa - A Policy Crossroads.

Claudia J. Carr - 2017 - Cham: Imprint: Springer.

This book is open access under a CC BY-NC 2.5 license. This book offers a devastating look at deeply flawed development processes driven by international finance. African governments and the global consulting industry. It examines major river basin development underway in the semi-arid borderlands of Ethiopia, Kenya and South Sudan and its disastrous human rights consequences for a half-million indigenous people. The volume traces the historical origins of Gibe III megadam construction along the Omo River in Ethiopia-in turn. (...)

David Kinley & Tom Davis - manuscript

The World Bank is no stranger to criticism of its projects, especially in respect of its privatization and private sector development projects. Critics point to the environmental, social and cultural damage that certain projects have caused, which for some appears not just to be a product of the individual projects themselves, but symptomatic of a broader policy failure within the Bank to engage with the social consequences of its actions. In fact, and somewhat surprisingly, both the Bank's critics and its (...)

The political conception makes sense of human rights strictly in light of their role in international human rights practice, more specifically by describing how they justify interventions against states that engage in or fail to prevent human rights violations. This conception is, therefore, normative and fact-dependent. Beyond this, it does not seem to have much to say about the actual nature of international human rights practice. ## Abstract

The way many human rights advocates frame the international norm against child, early, and forced marriage (CEFM) has shifted in the past decade. While CEFM has historically been framed as driven by poverty and underdevelopment, advocates have more recently discussed the problem with a feminist sexuality frame. What leads advocates to change their framing about an international norm? We build an argument that stresses how (a) the nature of the frame, (b) the characteristics of the advocates, and (c) the characteristics of the discursive environment interact to determine whether and to what extent advocates will adopt an alternative frame. We use a multi-methods approach (machine-learning text analysis, process tracing, and interviews) to examine the process of frame adoption around an international norm. Our theoretical understanding of international norms requires a better grasp on the role of framing, especially framing among the very norm entrepreneurs that are critical to international norm diffusion.

Human Rights Review

 Editorial board  Aims & scope  Journal updates

Human Rights Review is an interdisciplinary journal which provides a scholarly forum in which human rights issues and their underlying empirical, theoretical and philosophical foundations are explored. The journal seeks to place human rights practices and policies within a theoretical perspective in order to link empirical research to broader human rights issues. Human Rights Review welcomes submissions from all academic areas in order to foster a wide-ranging dialogue on issues of concern to both the academic and the policy-making communities. The journal is receptive to submissions drawing from diverse methodologies and approaches including case studies, quantitative analysis, legal scholarship and philosophical discourse in order to provide a comprehensive discussion concerning human rights issues. — show all

Editorial procedure

Double-blind peer review

This journal follows a double-blind reviewing procedure. This means that the author will remain anonymous to the reviewers throughout peer review. It is the responsibility of the author to anonymize the manuscript and any associated materials.

- Author names, affiliations and any other potentially identifying information should be removed from the manuscript text and any accompanying files (such as figures of supplementary material);
- A separate Title Page should be submitted, containing title, author names, affiliations, and the contact information of the corresponding author. Any acknowledgements, disclosures, or funding information should also be included on this page;
- Authors should avoid citing their own work in a way that could reveal their identity.

Please also add: a cover page to the manuscript which includes the title, an abstract of 150 words (which should not contain any undefined abbreviations or unspecified references) and 4 to 6 keywords which can be used for indexing purposes.

The review process generally takes three months for completion.

Search help

Important things to keep in mind

- If you don't use any special operator in a query (no &, |, -, ~, etc. except *), an OR operator ( | ) will be inserted between all words. Otherwise, an AND ( & ) operator will be inserted wherever no OR operator is found.
- The search engine reduces all words to their stems. For example, a search for "intentionalities" will match the same documents as a search for "intentionality". A search for "dualist" should give the same result as a search for "dualism". However, documents with exact matches are ranked significantly higher than documents with stem matches only. No stemming is done when the * operator is used.
- Word order matters. For example "theories of consciousness" and "consciousness of theories" will return different results.
- You can use + and - as on Google, and many other operators not found on Google (read on). + is equivalent to the AND operator (&).
- Our search engine conflates British and American spelling variations. For example, searches for 'color' and 'colour' should give you the same results.
- Arbitrarily nested brackets and negations are possible.

Operators

- AND and OR operators:

If you don't use any special operator in a query (no &, |, -, ~, etc. except *), an OR operator ( | ) will be inserted between all words. Otherwise, an AND ( & ) operator will be inserted wherever no OR operator is found. So in the example above the & after "content" is superfluous.

OR operator precedence is higher than AND, so the above is equivalent to:

- NOT operator:

- truncation operator:

Matches both "dualism" and "dualist".

- field search operator:

The following fields can be searched:

- format (value is either 'book' or 'article')
- pubtype (value is one of: 'book', 'journal', 'chapter', 'thesis', 'manuscript')
- authors
- title
- descriptors
- source (journal or anthology)

At the moment it is only possible to search abstracts by searching all fields (by not using @).

You can specify multiple fields like this:

The @ operator affects all expressions following it. If you want "world" to be matched against every field, you can do this:

Global Gender Justice: Human Rights and Political Responsibility

Authors: Margaret A McLaren

Article 2019
in Critical Horizons (A Journal of Philosophy and Social Theory) v20 n2 (20190403): 127-144

Peer-reviewed

Summary: I argue that Iris Marion Young's concept of political responsibility is well suited for transnational feminism analyses. Young's work reveals the intersections of ethical, social, and political theory; her model of political responsibility articulates a view of shared social and political responsibility for the structural conditions of exploitation and domination. ### Feminist reformulations of human rights

Authors: Milene Consenso Tonetto

Article

in Human Affairs v29 n3 (2019/07/26): 311-327

Peer-reviewed

Summary: For feminist philosophers it is important to consider how the language of human rights can be used to support women's issues and how well it is established in political institutions. However, they suggest that human rights should be reformulated and supplemented with other ethical frameworks to ensure that injustices to women are not neglected. The aim of
