METHODOLOGY AND THE STUDY OF RELIGION

LIBRARY WORKSHOP

Monday, October 27, 2025

Éthel Gamache, Librarian | ethel.gamache@concordia.ca

Sources to support your fieldwork research project

- Consulting at least three academic sources.
- Searching for popular media related to the community (newspapers, magazine and other media).
- Exploring the website of the researched religious communities.

Outline

How to find and access resources

- Search operators
- Introduction to the Library website & the Religions and Cultures subject guide
- Using Sofia and Interlibrary loans
- Using the databases Academic Search Complete, ATLA and Google Scholar to find academic articles
- Using the databases Canadian Newsstream and Eureka.cc to find newspaper articles
- Using Google Advanced Search to explore websites

Ice-breaker Activity

- | | |
|--|----------------------|
| 1. I use or have used online library services. | 1. Move your fingers |
| 2. I know how to apply boolean logic to searching. | 2. Touch your head |
| 3. When I search for articles, I often don't find what I'm looking for. | 3. Play air piano |
| 4. I prefer to use Google / Scholar to find scholarly articles. | 4. Wave |
| 5. I have attended a library workshop before. | 5. Take a bow |
| 6. I've met with a librarian to find relevant sources for an assignment. | 6. Clap your hands |

This activity was created by K-Lee Fraser, University of Toronto Scarborough, K-Lee's Remixed Information Literacy Games.

Abstract: Contemporary Paganism portrays gender in an array of different ways and, as such, is very inclusive of sexual diversity. But how do queer people take part in the Pagan community? More precisely, what kind of efforts or changes do queer and transgender people have to make in order to relate to the Pagan community? To answer these questions, this article examines how queer and transgender people proceed to different kinds of negotiations, especially regarding the concept of gender, that allow them to either participate actively in the Pagan community or to distance themselves from it. After a brief definition of the Pagan community in Montreal and its take on gender, it will demonstrate, with the help of certain concepts from queer studies and performance studies, how a few queer individuals perform gender in ritual context and how gender and queerness impact their relationship with Pagan religious beliefs, practices, and communities.

The idea for Scintillements 1001 Lights, an installation at the Museum of Jewish Montreal, came to Philip Szporer after his mother's death. The two have worked together for nearly 20 years, focusing on dance-oriented documentaries and short art films; recently they had started to think about projections for museum or gallery spaces. Millar, who is not Jewish, said she was drawn to the project initially for its dance element but, "in the course of filming the participants, often in their homes, I started recognizing something especially personal to me: the connection between mothers and daughters," she said.

The idea for Scintillements 1001 Lights, an installation at the Museum of Jewish Montreal, came to Philip Szporer after his mother's death. He was closing up her apartment when he came upon the candelabrum she had used every Friday night to light the candles ushering in the Jewish Sabbath.

"We weren't a traditionally religious family," he recalled. "We had cultural and social traditions - and this one connection with candle lighting was steadfast for my mother."

The ritual made an impression on him, even as a youngster. "There was the candle lighting, the notion of bringing light into a darkened space, but there was something else going on," he recalled. It was also "a moment of reflection, of meditation, of remembering."

He held onto the candelabrum and, in time, started to light the candles himself on Friday nights and say the
