Ongoing archive of creative and collaborative art production <<http://cynthiammond.org>>
- 2023 La Ville Extraordinaire
Website documenting the outcomes of a 3-year Partnership Development grant (SSHRC) that resulted in the collection of over 200 interviews with older members of marginalized communities in Montreal. At the heart of the project are the urban memories of members of the Filipino, Chinese, Haitian, Jewish, Arabic-speaking, and working-class communities, as well as older sex workers. The aim of the project was to learn about the city by listening to such voices and perspectives, which are rarely considered in the fields of architectural history, urban planning, and heritage/conservation studies. Using the Atlascine platform, our team geolocated 141 of the interviews through time and location, demonstrating never-before mapped intersections between identity, place, and memory in Montreal. All oral histories from the project are to be deposited at the Centre for Oral History and Digital Storytelling in 2024, with the exception of the interviews with members of the sex work community, who are building their own online archive in collaboration with a sex-workers advocacy group. <<https://rs-atlascine.concordia.ca/la-ville-extraordinaire/index.html>>
- 2022 The Spaces of Restorative and Transitional Justice

Website documenting the outcomes of a 2-year Insight Development grant (SSHRC) that used oral history and spatial analysis to explore the emerging terrain of alternative justice architecture. What does reconciliation look and feel like, in a spatial sense? Our team interviewed architects, designers, advocates, and survivors in order to learn about precedents and possible future directions for the design of alternative justice spaces. Our open-access website provides access to 37 case studies of existing alternative justice spaces, both purpose-built and adaptive re-use; oral histories with diverse individuals involved in alternative justice, and designs produced by architecture students at the School of Architecture, McGill University that respond to these materials and propose provisional solutions for the spatial needs of alternative justice at different scales.

- 2010 Montreal as Palimpsest: Graduate Research in Montreal's Architectural and Urban Histories
 Website documenting three years of graduate student research in the history of architecture, community and urban planning in Montreal. Each year has a distinct research and theoretical focus and its own site, reflecting the course to which the site is attached. The three sites are visually and thematically linked through an easy to use portal. Student papers were produced through a peer-review process. The website, funded by the Jarislowsky Institute for the Study of Canadian Art, is an open-access resource. Pata Macedo, design
